We All Have Worries Important to Remember 111 Better Than None Chapman's Homer, Which?

By Arthur Brisbane

Uncle Sam's "daily worry" for today has to do with a "baby drouth," threatening 30,000,000 acres. The winter wheat outlook is uncertain. Nature, unfortunately, refuses to be regulated.

Haile Selassie's worry gets worse. His savage tribesmen are in revolt, looting, killing, and foreigners, including Red Cross units, are leaving his capital, Addis Ababa, hurriedly—Mussolini is coming.

The English worry, the pound falling, higher taxes promised. Money must be spent getting ready for another war, especially for air attack, if it should come. The worst of the worry is that England's Royal Air Force experts say it would be impossible to defend London from air bombardment, even if the bombardment were announced in advance.

France worries about German military units close to the Austrian border. If Hitler, already named "Supreme War Lord," takes Frederick the Great for model, an advance on Austria would be appropriate, and reasonably safe. The empire of the Hapsburgs has dwindled since the days of Maria Theresa.

Paris' worst worry is that Vienna might welcome Hitler, if he should cross the border.

Tokio worries about Russia "plotting a war against Japan," but no plotting is necessary. Russia knows the location of every Japanese city, town and factory. It would be necessary only to declare war and start dropping bombs, particularly bombs that spread fire.

Starting a war for foreign countries is as easy as "shooting up a gambling game" among our racketeers; no secrecy or plotting necessary.

The news reminds men of Congreve's warning:

"Heaven has no rage like love to hatred turned,
Nor hell a fury like a woman scorned."

R. J. Kruger awoke in Brooklyn, N. Y., when his wife, Loretta, aged thirty-two, stabbed him in the back seven times with a carving knife. She told police calmly, "Everything is over now, nothing matters," and would not change her pajamas for a dress, to go to the police station.

Her husband beat her, she said, beat her again, and "we made up." But, "there was a girl," and that could not be forgiven. The stabbed husband told police:

"I yelled, 'Help!' 'Murder!' 'Police!' Then I don't remember much."

He would have avoided seven separate stabs had he remembered Congreve.

In France, there are one hundred and eleven candidates for one seat in the Chamber of Deputies. Being French, these gentlemen have at least one hundred and eleven different opinions as to what is needed "to save France."

That need not fill Americans with any "superiority complex"; to have 111 ideas is perhaps better than not to have any.

A headline on the sporting page read, "Chapman's Homer Helps Reds to Win."

Every American knew that this meant somebody named Chapman had made a "home run." Some, extremely few, thought, "Hello, some Russian Communists have been reading Keats' poem, 'On First Looking into Chapman's Homer,'" and looked "at each other with a wild surmise," when told that Chapman's homer meant hitting a ball with a bat.

New Jersey citizens dropped from relief invade legislative halls, camp out, sleep on floor, promise to remain until New Jersey supplies money and food.

Ewing Township, N J., with 9000 population, taking 450 famished ones dole, told them officially to go out and beg. Begging being illegal, each family was provided with a begging license. That may be called "economic relief."

Canada talks about letting the Bank of Canada include silver in its "currency reserve" along with gold.

This country thought it wanted silver, then decided the other way, and will soon be getting more gold from France and England. Franc and pound are both dropping. If angels ever laugh, it must be when they see black men in South Africa digging gold out of one hole in the ground, and white men in North America feverishly burying that same gold in a deeper hole, doing nothing with it.

Remembered in Will Now Under Litigation

TWO NIECES ATTACK LAST DOCUMENT OF RECLUSE

Contest of the will of Mrs. Reka Harris, 80-year-old Jamaica Plain recluse, leaving $12,000 to a doctor who treated her the first time in her last illness, was begun today in probate court.

The action was started formally when Attorney Samuel Sigiman of 256 Washington street filed with Arthur W. Sullivan, register of probate, an appearance for two nieces, Mrs. Olga Doughton of Woodcliff street, Roxbury, and Lillian Lloyd of Roxbury.

They were cut off with $1 each, although a school janitor friend was bequeathed $1000 from the $22,000 estate, and there were other large bequests in addition to that made the doctor.

Meanwhile an autopsy ordered by Dr. Frederick J. Bailey, deputy health commissioner, showed that the aged woman, who lived in a squalor despite her comfortable wealth, died of natural causes.

LEFT TO DOCTOR

By a will written under kerosene lamplight and on an old calendar, Mrs. Harris bequeathed more than half of her wealth to Dr. H. William Benckner of South Huntington avenue, Jamaica Plain. At midnight Monday, he responded to a call to her bedside.

The first time she had been his patient was at 10:30 the same night, he related.

He testified, as the will was filed

BEAUTY DIES IN 11 STORY PLUNGE

Springfield, April 24—Turning her back on a party at which an admirer had failed to appear, Regina Maciora, 19, red-haired and beautiful, leaped to death from the 11th floor of the Hotel Charles today, according to police.

Police said her jump was made from the room of N. G. King, 40, of Coolidge road, Belmont, sales manager for a Boston manufacturing concern.

King, they said, was in the room at the time with two other women who were identified on the police record as Mrs. Ida Greene and Miss Emma Gouley, both of Holyoke.

The four had arranged to meet Earl Magee, a friend of Miss Maciora, a bartender at a local cafe, in King's room for a social hour after he finished his work, police declared.

They said further that all had been in the cafe during the night. Miss Maciora went to the hotel room first, King and the two women following later.

SEEMS DEPRESSED

The girl appeared depressed. She had refused a drink, they said, and asked several times why Magee did not appear.

A window in the room was open and she sat on the sill for some time. Twice she threatened to jump out, but the others did not believe she meant it. King tried to persuade her to get away from the window.

Suddenly, without a word, she whipped around and dived out.

Her body struck the roof of a car owned by D. Joseph Greeley, local attorney, which was parked in Liberty street. Her neck, skull and jaw were broken.

Miss Maciora was the daughter of Mrs. Felix Maciora of Smith street, New Britain, Conn. Her cousin, Lucian Maciora, is police commissioner of that city.

NIGHT CLUB GIRL

She was formerly employed in a night club in West Springfield. The recent flood inundated this, and it was not reopened. She left the city for some time, but two weeks ago returned and took a room at the Crown Hotel, where she had since lived.

Besides her mother, the victim is survived by four sisters, Mrs. George Marion and Mrs. Walter Alquist, both of New Britain; Mrs. Hanry Rakaski of Meriden, Conn., and Mrs. J. C. Kilpatrick of the Boulder Bank Club, Scarsdale, N. Y.

Dr. Charles J. Downey returned a formal report of suicide.

G-Men Hunt For Targets, Not Karpis

Out of the Post Building a dozen G-men trundled themselves today, toting rifles and sub-machine guns.

Great was the confusion round and about, and many rumors.

Well the phones hinted and the presses rumbled and editions of Boston evening newspapers—not the Boston Evening American, however—slewed out into the streets with great headlines.

"Dozen G-Men Rout Karpis in Bay State" was the gist of these great headlines, and the stories went on to say that the G-Men had "secret information that Karpis had been seen in the vicinity and the like.

Now this same line up that a dozen G-Men had left the Federal Building with rifles and sub-machine guns and had driven away in cars came to the Boston Evening American, with the idea suggested that this might be a Karpis hunt.

However, as the Boston Evening American has the habit of printing news and not unsupported rumors, this newspaper did a little checking and discovered the true story of the G-men exodus.

They were out at the rifle range in Wakefield, drilling targets with their rifles and sub-machine guns and having a very enjoyable time.

The range practice is a monthly affair for the G-Men, and is what would be called in school a "required subject", on which they are marked.

FIRE FELLS 2, SCORE FLEE

Worcester, April 24 — Two men were overcome and more than a score of other workers, some of them girls, were driven to the street today during a two-alarm fire in the business district.

Trapped by choking, black smoke in the four-story building at 15-18 Foster street, Hjalmar E. Nordstrom, 57, of 38 Sherbrook avenue, was overcome and was carried to the street. His brother, Rudolph W. Nordstrom, 52, was partly overcome.

The fire started on the fourth floor in the plant of the Central Typesetting Company and spread rapidly down into the third floor, where the Lavigne Press and the Marvel-Nye Company, paints and varnishes, are located. Damage was estimated at $25,000.

Balances and Receipts

Washington, April 24 — Today's Treasury Balance $2,538,337,894. U. S. Customs Receipts $24,689,974.

TRIPLE CRASH IN ROXBURY INJURES 6

Death took the wheel today and claimed the 64th Greater Boston victim this year.

AUTOS HAVE KILLED 64 IN GREATER BOSTON THIS YEAR

Nine other persons were taken to hospitals, two of them in critical condition.

All except one were involved in auto accidents.

A hit-and-run bicyclist in Jamaica Plain collided with a woman so hard she had to be taken to a hospital.

Mrs. Ida Masif, 50, of East Brookline street, South End, was killed almost instantly when she was struck by an automobile at Washington and West Newton streets, South End.

Dying at Boston City Hospital is Walter J. McMullen, 40, a printer, of Eustis street, Roxbury. He was knocked down on Tremont street, South End.

AGED MAN RUN DOWN

A 71-year-old Quincy man, John Mitchell of Summer street, is the other victim on the danger list. He was walking home from a boxing match when run down. He is at Quincy City Hospital.

Six girls, on their way to work at a Roxbury laundry, were all hurt when their machine was in the center of a three-car crash in Massachusetts avenue, Roxbury. Their car overturned.

Taken to Boston City Hospital were Caroline T. Salton, 20, of West Fourth street, South Boston, who was driving; Anna Devilkis, 19

Dust Storm Sweeps Merrimac Valley

Concord, N. H., April 24 (AP)—High winds swept huge clouds of sand and silt down the Merrimack Valley today between Franklin and Manchester.

From one to three feet of fine sand has been deposited by the recent floods on the once fertile lands of the valley. The dust in railroad coaches has proved a serious inconvenience to passengers. The sand has also damaged generators that supply light for the coaches.

Roosevelt's Son Is 'Cut' By M'Nair

Pittsburgh, April 24 (INS)—Mayor William N. McNair, Pittsburgh's implacable chief executive, today added another bizarre chapter to his ever-increasing headline adventures when he refused to shake hands with Elliott Roosevelt, second son of President Roosevelt.

The mayor was at the county airport where he was to greet a group of amateur actors. He was asked by a photographer if he wouldn't say "Hello" to young Roosevelt, who stopped here five minutes while en route from Cleveland to Washington.

"I won't shake hands with him," McNair blurted. "I won't shake hands with any of the Roosevelts!"

ROOSEVELT PUZZLED

Meanwhile another newspaperman had approached Roosevelt and the suggestion he meet Pittsburgh's mayor.

"I would be delighted," the young man replied.

As Roosevelt came up, however, the mayor walked slowly away. When the pair caught up with him the newsman asked the mayor to pose with the President's son.

Making no move to extend his hand, McNair asked:

"Mr. Roosevelt, what relation are you to the man in the White House?"

"I am his son," Roosevelt replied.

"He and his gang put me in jail," the mayor shot.

"I don't understand you," countered Roosevelt, who evidently had not heard of hizzoner's two-hour sojourn in the city lockup last Saturday.

HE'S "SURLY CUSS"

"Well," said the mayor, "tell your old man I am out."

Roosevelt:

"I don't know anything about your troubles. I'm not in politics."

With that McNair turned and walked away.

Before his plane took off, Roosevelt was heard to comment:

"That fellow (McNair) is sort of a surly cuss, isn't he? Well, if he thinks I give a damn he is mistaken."

Victor Emmanuel May Be Emperor

Rome, April 24 (AP)—Unconfirmed reports today were that the Italian government intends to make King Victor Emmanuel "Emperor of Ethiopia," just as King Edward of England also has the title "Emperor of India."

Head Cold Keeps Roosevelt in Study

Washington, April 24 (INS)—A slight head cold forced President Roosevelt to forgo his semi-weekly conference with reporters today and to spend the day in his study.

DOCTOR SAYS MAGILL HURT HEAD IN FALL

Halifax, N. S., April 24 (INS)—Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding, leading figures in the grim drama of the Moose River gold mine cave-in, were both in the hospital here today, definitely on the road to health.

All doubt that the men would survive the rigors of their imprisonment in the narrow mine chamber, which cost the life of their associate, Herman Magill, has been dispelled.

Scadding was brought to Halifax Hospital from Moose River yesterday afternoon, and physicians this morning said he probably would be in sufficiently good shape to leave for his home in Toronto in ten days.

Dr. Robertson was brought today by seaplane from Moose River emergency hospital.

Scadding's condition, arising from a severe case of "trench feet," caused concern in physicians attending him. They worker to prevent aggravation of the infection, known as an incipient stage of gangrene.

STORY OF HORROR

Premier Augus MacDonald and Dr. F. R. Davis, health minister of Nova Scotia, met the plane carrying Doctor Robertson, who was described as looking "as if he just go back from a fishing trip."

The Toronto doctor, himself, said he was not as tired as "a lot of people who stayed up all night listening to reports of the rescue."

The story of their ten days' entombment was unfolded by Dr. Robertson to attending doctors. He said:

"More than once we thought the end was at hand.

BOTH MINE SURVIVORS GAIN AFTER HOSPITAL REST

MEN TO TELL STORIES AT INQUEST

into the tunnel by the rescue workers we thought the tiny boxwood fire we'd built must have ignited a loose stick of dynamite and expected a sudden explosion would finish us.

"We raced from our shelf to the other end of that awful chamber. But there was no explosion.

"Just last Sunday we were afraid we might never again see the light of day.

"It was then that water from some mysterious underground source began dripping steadily faster and faster through the ceiling of the chamber where somehow we managed to live since Easter Sunday.

"It was then that I told the people at the surface through our little microphone that we had only 10 or 12 hours more to live. But, luckily the water stopped dripping and the danger of drowning like rats disappeared."

CALLS MAGILL "HERO"

While provincial government authorities conducted an inquest into Magill's death, Dr. Robertson acclaimed the young lawyer as a true hero during those dark hours heavy with fear and foreboding.

The rescued doctor said:

"Magill knew that our salvation depended on letting those above know that we were still alive and exactly where we could be located.

"He was sick even when he entered the mine with us, last Sunday with his last ounce of energy he went through the black, damp 111-foot bevel of the mine and found a little dry boxwood with which we kindled our fire.

"Lighting the bit of candle we had, Magill started the fire and the smoke curled up through the Reynolds shaft, telling the people above we were still alive and showing how we could be reached.

"On Sunday Magill could hear the digging going on above us, but he was too desperately ill to say heed. He couldn't even get over to the microphone to talk with his wife, waiting on the surface to hear his voice.

"I tried all I could to save his life, but late Sunday night I realized nothing more could be done for him.

"For hours I held him in my arms to keep him warm.

"That night he asked: 'Who kicked me?'

"I suspected then that he had stomach ulcers and that there'd been a break for the worst.

"Early Monday morning he sat up suddenly. He was hysterical. He uttered several incoherent words. Then he tumbled backward.

"In two minutes he was dead. In falling dead he fractured his skull on the rocky floor of our underground shelf."

HEARD SOUNDS OF PICKS

When Magill, who was Robertson's partner in ownership of the 54-year old mine, died, his body was tenderly covered with an old overcoat and Robertson and Scadding settled down to await their rescue.

They could hear the welcome sound of swinging picks and shovels, bringing them new and sustaining hope.

The overpowering joy that seized the entombed men when finally they heard noises from above last Sunday was described by Dr. Robertson. He said:

"After those many hours of silence down there, we heard faintly the blowing of a siren. We rushed over to the center of our chamber and there we discovered a diamond drill hole had been bored from the surface and that a small pipe had been sunk to us.

"You can imagine our feelings when we realized that communication with the surface had been established.

"We tapped the pipe and shouted up with all our strength to let the people above know we were still alive.

"Then the little microphone was lowered and we were able to talk with the folks on the surface.

"And the next day we heard for the first time the blows of the picks and shovels against the rock and dirt that held us prisoners."

TELLS OF LANDSLIDE

One of the most terrifying experiences of the nightmare through which the entombed men lived was the rumbling of the earth on Easter Monday, the day after they were trapped by a landfall on the 85-foot level of the Reynolds shaft through which they had descended into the mine.

The landslide itself was heard by the men in the mine as a series of "sharp cracks—like giant rifle shots."

There were four of these as tons of rock and dirt tumbled and shifted four times. Then, Dr. Robertson related:

"We jumped quickly out of the shaft where we were when the slide occurred and into the 141-foot level of the mine.

"For four hours afterward on Easter Monday morning the grinding and rumbling of the earth continued. It sounded like deep, rolling thunder.

MAGILL ILL ON EASTER

"I confess I was pessimistic at that time, for I believed the whole mine area had caved in and that we would never be saved.

"Scadding at first thought the shaft house had toppled into the pit, carrying its crew with it."

Magill, it was revealed, was suffering from pleurisy, as well as stomach ulcers, but insisted on entering the mine Easter Sunday together with Robertson and Scadding, the mine timekeeper.

The inquest into the death of Magill, which opened in Moose River yesterday, was postponed last night until next Thursday, at which time, it is hoped, testimony from Dr. Robertson, and perhaps from Scadding, will be available.

Dr. Glen Donovan, who examined the body of Magill, 30-year-old lawyer, declared he thought death was due to pneumonia.

PROBE CAVE-IN CAUSE

Magill died in Dr. Robertson's arms in the mine early Monday, a short time after communication had been established by the entombed trio with rescue workers.

Meanwhile Minister of Mines Michael Dwyer was preparing for a complete investigation into circumstances surrounding the Easter Sunday cave-in that trapped the men.

Dwyer said the old mine, unworked for 25 years, was flooded for several years and was in a dangerous condition before Robertson, Scadding and Magill entered it on a tour of inspection. Dwyer said the men had been warned repeatedly that the mine was not safe.

The mines minister revealed, incidentially, that since the rescue was effected early yesterday the emergency shaft through which the men were brought to the surface had sunk almost a foot.

Wife's Faith Buoyed Up Doctor Until Rescue

Mrs. D. E. Robertson, wife of Doctor Robinson, who was rescued with Alfred Scadding in the Moose River, N. S., gold mine cave-in. Her faith in his rescue buoyed up the doctor through the final hours.

TONS OF ROOF CRASHING IN ON MINE

Halifax, N. S., April 24 (AP)—The roof of the Moose River gold mine, from which two living men and one dead were recovered yesterday, was settling slowly today. Minister of Mines Michael Dwyer said, and could not hold up longer than a day or two.

"I am absolutely satisfied that today we could not have got into it as the narrow opening to the prison of the two men sagged six inches after they were taken out," he said.

"By the end of the week the whole structure of the mine will be crushed completely."

The mine was slipping all the time the men were working in the shaft and there had been a distinct feeling that the work of rescue could not be continued after another day.

It was impossible to put in sufficient timber to carry the weight of the roof, he declared. The largest area in which the men were able to work was four feet by three feet and the smallest two feet six inches by three feet.

There was constant danger 25 or 30 men would perish while looking for Dr. D. E. Robertson and Charles Alfred Scadding, who were rescued

Gold Mining Pays If---

Halifax, N. S., April 24 (AP)—Alfred Scadding's hopes for wealth from the Moose River gold mine may yet be realized—not from the gold, but from the fact that he lived for 10 days in an underground cavern.

Recovering from hunger and exposure in a hospital here, he received today an offer of $500 a week to make personal appearances for a theater chain.

Newspapers offered him big amounts for signed articles. Broadcasting companies asked him to name his price.

GIRL REMEMBERED

Among the several beneficiaries named in the strange will is Elaine Lundstrom, of Chestnut avenue, Jamaica Plain, who, with her mother, attended the aged woman for some time. She was bequeathed $2000.

Mrs. Olga Doten of Woodcliff street, Roxbury, a niece of the recluse, said that she and the other relatives cut off by Mrs. Harris would contest the will together, adding that she believed that there was "another will which would be found." She described her late aunt as "eccentric."

Salem Woman Granted Divorce

Salem, April 24—Divorce, custody of an 11-year-old daughter and $5 weekly support was awarded to Mrs. Flora M. Peichat, Hancock street, by Judge Edward B. O'Brien after she had testified to alleged habitual intoxication on the part of Louis R. Peichat.

The hit-and-run bicyclist in Jamaica Plain, a young man, ran down Mrs. Mae Piper, 42, of Park drive, Back Bay. Similar cases, police said, had been reported previously.

Edward Lauds Mine Rescuers

Halifax, N. S., April 24 — Royal words of praise were conveyed today to the crew of Stellarton dragermen who effected the rescue of Dr. D. Edwin Robertson and Alfred Scadding.

In a cable to Lieutenant-Governor W. H. Covert of Nova Scotia, King Edward VIII stated:

"I am thrilled with admiration for the heroism displayed by the gallant men, who, disregarding risk to their own lives, effected the rescue of Dr. Robertson and Mr. Scadding from the Moose river mine.

"Please express my heartfelt congratulations on the success of their courageous efforts and my hope they are not suffering any ill-effects from the hardships they underwent.

EDWARD R. I."

SPEED TO SICK

'Men in White' Ride Machine

What lies behind the words, "I want an ambulance"?

As these four words are called, by day or by night, what are the steps that go to complete the routine which follows as swiftly as they are received?

A routine in keeping with 20th century speed and efficiency—and one which, according to Dr. James W. Manary, superintendent of the Boston City Hospital, wasn't always thus.

Back in the "horse and buggy" ambulance days it was practically impossible to get to the scene of an accident, fire or maternity case and return within an hour.

Dr. Manary placed the ambulance facilities of the City Hospital at the disposal of the Boston Evening American for a day in order that a first hand picture of this action behind the scenes with his "men in white," might be obtained.

But before illustrating how his high powered seven ambulance routine operates—and perhaps by way of humorous contrast, he cited a case back in the days when ambulances ran with a horse in place of an engine.

Horse Days

"In those days it wasn't unusual for an ambulance call to take the best part of a day coming and going," he reminded. "And at that we thought we were pretty speedy.

"I remember one that took all night. The call was from East Boston, and necessitated crossing the ferry. It was a cold, snowy night and the horse wasn't going any too well to begin with. The ferry, however, usually cooperated with the "ambulance" and was there at the appointed time to take it across.

"The patient lived far out in East Boston, and after arriving the doctors decided that it would be best for all concerned if they treated the patient at home. The family knowing the doctors were hungry after their trip, urged them to stay to dinner. Then they all talked it over and decided to remain for the night.

"That will perhaps illustrate best the contrast between then and now," he added.

He then placed a record sheet for the past year upon the desk before us.

80,000 Miles

On this schedule were indicated the number of trips, number of patients cared for, and number of miles run for the year, by the ambulance service. This record included beside the City Hospital, the South or Contagious Department, and the Haymarket and East Boston Relief Stations.

The number of ambulance trips totalled 12,839; the number of patients 12,401, and the total number of miles run, 80,057.

Quite a change from the horse and buggy days!

The system behind those figures proved an interesting illustration of the manner in which they are arrived at.

When a call is received there are several types of ambulance service on hand to respond. It may be an emergency call from a private home, to which a doctor, nurse and driver answer.

A contagious call is answered from the South Department. Or a street accident, whereby the police put through the call.

The operator receiving the call at the hospital enters the information on a blue ambulance slip, and stamps it on a time clock.

Dr. Manary explained that at the City Hospital they send a driver and registered male nurse to medical and non-emergency cases.

As he was speaking a medical ambulance call came in.

"Would you like to go along and see how it feels to ride one?" he asked. "You know nobody wants to ride in an ambulance but I imagine a lot of people would like to know what it's like to go out on call. How about it?"

That ride, high on the front seat of the machine of mercy, proved to be exciting, to say the least.

We had gone out for one patient—and came back with two.

As the ambulance drew up before the house to which we had been called, a group of small boys on the opposite side of the street became curious and decided to investigate.

One little six-year-old fellow dashed out into the street ahead of his playmates, and there was a sudden screech of brakes as he tripped and fell in the path of a large high powered car.

The medical case within the house was temporarily forgotten as we sped to pick him up.

Good Brakes!

Fortunately, those brakes had been good and the wheels hadn't touched him. But it was decided to bring him back with us for further examination just to be certain.

The medical patient, a moaning and groaning man, was removed from the house to the ambulance upon a stretcher, and the return ride was on.

At the hospital the doctors agreed that the little boy was suffering mostly from fright, and a few bruises and cuts, and he seemed very happy as they told him that he might return home with his dad. The medical case would remain.

And all this had happened within the space of an hour.

Modern hospitalization, and particularly the ambulance service, has, as Dr. Manary observes, "come a long way from the horse and buggy days."

BUTTER BATH DENIED

Black Eye Revealed in Love Suit

It was all news to him that he had rubbed the faces of his wife and five-year-old son in a gob of butter on the floor, Louis Christensen, a Bellingham dairy farmer, testified today in Probate Court at Dedham.

Christensen was testifying in the resumed hearing on the divorce suit of Mrs. Mary Christensen, also of Bellingham, in which she charges cruel and abusive treatment and seeks custody of two children.

Last week, Mrs. Christensen testified to the alleged butter incident, but the dairy farmer not only denied this but denied beating her or giving her father a black eye.

Felix Benite of Bellingham, 16, the man's employe, testified for him and told a story of the incident in which the father-in-law was declared to have suffered a blacked eye.

Young Benite said Mrs. Christensen had fainted and her husband was holding her in his arms when her father attacked Christensen.

Christensen defended himself and the older man was hit, Benite said.

ALL'S QUIET AT CAPITAL

Washington, April 24 (AP)—This was a day of rest for Representative Marion Zioncheck, the young man from the far Northwest, and so the capital's police got a chance to catch their breath.

Zioncheck spent last night in his apartment, where he played with the four diamond-backed terrapins he keeps as pets.

Late last night, after an uproarious day crammed with hassles, arguments with a judge, fines, penalties and confinement in a police "bull pen," the representative from Seattle said he had no special plans for today.

"I may not even attend the House session," he told inquiring reporters. "If I change my mind, I'll let you know."

Whether he planned to take his big shiny roadster out for another spin he did not say. The roadster was at the center of the trouble which rose to turbulent climax yesterday, when he declined to go to court after arrest for speeding at 70 miles an hour and defied the judge. He was finally fined $25 for speeding, $20 for contempt and $25 in forfeited collateral.

For about an hour Zioncheck was forced to wait in the bull pen until Representative John P. O'Connor of New York, Chairman of the House Rules Committee, arrived with the funds and rescued him.

Wilkins on Zep For Hearst Papers

New York, April 24 (USS)—An undersea trip of exploration from Spitzbergen to the Bering Sea will be attempted next year by Sir Hubert Wilkins, the noted explorer announced last night when he sailed for Europe on the Bremen.

Sir Hubert will return on the new Zeppelin, Von Hindenburg on its maiden flight to the United States next month. He will act as special correspondent aboard for Universal Service and the Hearst newspapers.

Secret Bridal Revealed

Bridal Revealed

A surprise shower given for Evelyn LeBlanc of Northern avenue, Lynn, turned out to be more of a surprise than her assembled friends had anticipated.

Miss LeBlanc, attractive winner of several beauty contests appeared at the party with her supposed fiance, Frank Colarusso, of Binney street, Boston.

Just as the festivities were getting under way, the couple created a mild sensation by revealing that they were married last June in Wilton, N. H.

N.Y. STRANGLER INDICTED

New York, April 24 (AP)—A grand jury today voted an indictment of murder in the first degree against John Fiorenza, 24, confessed slayer of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton in her Beekman place apartment on April 10.

The indictment was returned after half an hour.

Fiorenza, an upholster, confessed last Tuesday, according to Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine, that he killed Mrs. Titterton after criminally assaulting her.

Gaspipe Fails To Mar Chief Reeves' Aim

Chief of Police Walter Reeves of Swampscott took the gaspipe today.

That he took it on the right wrist, the wrist with which he shoots dimes with revolvers, appeared at first to be a tragedy. For he is scheduled to appear at an exhibition of the Massachusetts Police Revolver League today.

It so happens that Chief Reeves is as good a shot with his left hand as with his right.

About the first official act of the day was to try to straighten out a family difficulty. He tried argument. He tried diplomacy.

But when one of the contestants swung a gaspipe at another, he had to use his wrist to block the blow. There were no arrests.

"FUNNY how easy it is to get false impressions. I've always had the idea that Bond sells only $25 suits. And I like to spend a bit more. Doggone, man! —your $30 and $35 Rochester-tailored clothes are right down my alley!" ★ We're guilty—but we can't promise to completely reform. After all, our "Twenty-Fives" are causing so much talk around town that we really can't keep them out of the headlines. But if you are like our friend up above—if you like to spend a bit more—this may have kept you away from Bond's. And that's bad business for both of us! ★ You probably know that the finest clothes in these United States are made in Rochester, N. Y. But you may not know this—Bond is the only retail clothier in the country who owns and operates a factory in Rochester. It's the largest plant of its kind in the world—employing 1650 of Rochester's best hands, 52 weeks a year. It produces quality and style worthy of Rochester's best traditions—at a tariff of only $30 and $35. Were we to buy these clothes in the open market, we'd have to pay—and charge you—at least $7.50 more! ★ So don't catalogue us as only a $25 store! Take a good look at our Rochester-tailored "Thirties" and "Thirty-Fives"—and you're sure to say to yourself "I've certainly had you folks all wrong."

WELFARE COAL TESTED AFTER COMPLAINTS, FIN. COM. TOLD

Boston failed to make tests of its welfare coal from December to February, and it wasn't until complaints began to pour in, in March, that these tests were resumed, it was revealed today.

Then. James A. Sweeney, sealer of weights and measures for the city of Boston, told the Boston Finance Commission that experts found there were numerous instances of coal failing to meet contract standards.

The hearing was the last session of the commission, which has been probing complaints from welfare workers and welfare recipients that "fireproof" coal was delivered, that drivers demanded money from relief cases and that long delivery delays were frequent during the winter.

Sweeney said that his chemists recommended penalties for the companies failing to meet requirements, sums of the penalties being 25 cents on the ton. Commissioner Robert Robinson did the questioning.

Widow Plans Radio Seance With Houdini

Hollywood, Cal., April 24 (AP)—A "last supreme effort" to establish contact with Harry Houdini, famous magician who died 10 years ago, was announced here today by his widow.

Mrs. Houdini plans a public seance on a mountain top, possibly with a nationwide radio hookup.

"It will be a seance to end all seances," said Mrs. Houdini.

She disclosed a compact she said she had entered into with Houdini, Charles Carter and Howard Thurston, whereby the first three to die would make "one final attempt" to reach the survivor.

"It is my fateful and final duty to carry out this agreement," she said. "Maybe, together, one of them may come through.

"I hope to make the seance a coast-to-coast broadcast, with every radio the center of a psychic circle. This will lend the strength and aid of thousands silently listening in."

19 Pupils Felled By Mystery Odor

Columbus, Ga., April 24 (AP)—Physicians, psychologists and school authorities were baffled today by the strange malady which struck 19 pupils and a teacher almost simultaneously at a school here.

Theories of mass hysteria, food or gas poisoning all were discredited in part at least by extensive investigation of the weird phenomenon and no positive cause was discovered in their stead.

Junior Curry said:

"I smelled something and then I turned blind." He could not describe the smell.

Within the space of a few minutes Wdenesday, one child in the school yard and the others with the teacher on a second floor of the East Highlands Grammar School became suddenly and violently ill. Many fainted.

Close investigation of the school's gas system revealed no leaks and the operator of the school cafeteria said most of the children who were affected did not eat there.

Claim WPA Kept Taxes at $44

The average tax rate of Massachusetts was estimated at $44, but without the aid of the federal government, according to statistics compiled by WPA and other federal agencies, it "would have been $93."

This was included in the discussion and display of charts in support of their work by several hundred representatives of federal agencies operating in New England at the closing session of the second semi-annual co-ordination meeting.

Various Democratic office holders attended but Governor Curley, scheduled to speak, sent word that he was unable to do so, due to press of State business.

Works Progress Administration Director Paul Edwards declared that his department has 120,212 persons working on projects, more than half of whom, he claimed, were taken from relief rolls of the State. He said that to the end of March, $24,803,124 has been paid for Works Progress Administration projects in wages.

$10,000 Shock

Houston, Tex., April 24 (AP)—For damages in a traffic accident, an out-of-court settlement provided $10,000 for David L. Blair, 58-year-old Goose Creek Oil field worker.

He met his boss on the street, told him the news, and said "I want to get off this afternoon. I want to go over to Beaumont and get the $10,000 check that's waiting for me. I'll—"

He then collapsed. In a few minutes he was dead.

HAYES, POLICE HERO, DIES

Peter A. Hayes, former Boston policeman and three times awarded the Medal of Honor by the department, died today at his home in Bradstreet avenue, Beachmont.

A former Charlestown man, Mr. Hayes, with five brothers, was active in Boston and Charlestown civic and fraternal affairs for years.

James E. Hayes Council, K. of C., is named for one of the brothers. James and Peter were both charter members of that council. The deceased was also a member of the Bishop Cheverus Assembly, Fourth Degree, K. of C., and of the Boston Police Relief Association.

Funeral services will be held at Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Beachmont, at 9 a. m. Monday.

Mrs. Hayes is dead, but surviving are three sons, Henry T., James E. and Peter A. Hayes, Jr.; and three daughters, Sister Mary Dominick, attached to a West Springfield convent; Therese and Mary Hayes.

Another brother of the deceased, William, was a one-time Massachusetts representative and Boston health commissioner.

Mr. Hayes was a member of the police department for 41 years and during his last decade in service was in charge of the downtown squad covering the theatrical district, where he became known to many stage stars.

Lynn Man Guilty In Accosting Case

Charged with accosting a woman, Walter S. Hurd, 22, of Fayette street, Lynn, was found guilty in Lynn district court today and sentenced to two months in jail by Judge Philip A. Kiely. Hurd, who had pleaded not guilty, appealed and was held in $500.

Mrs. Blanche Mullay of Lewis street, Lynn, identified him as the man who jumped at her while she was walking along Broad street Tuesday night. It was disclosed in court that only about a month ago Hurd had completed a three-month sentence in jail for larceny of a fur coat.

At Gotham hospital, the petit aviatrix, cuddled Elinor Patricia, born Saturday, and announced that she was going to renew her pilot's license next month.

Alberta Ponders Test of Scrip Plan

Edmonton, Alta., April 24 (AP)—Alberta's social credit government today pondered a scrip system to rid itself of unemployment and promote its 1936 road building program.

While W. A. Fallow, minister of public works said adoption of the plan had not been decided upon yet, it was learned in government circles yesterday that the scrip or certificate plan will be tested on the road building program and if successful will be applied to other phases of the business life of the province.

Under the plan as explained in some quarters, certificates or scrip would be issued and two per cent stamps would be affixed for each by consumers handling them. For every $100 certificate issued, the government would collect $104 in a year.

At the end of the year, the government would redeem the certificates at face value in bank currency and the extra $4 collected in stamps would pay for administration of the plan.

ASK SHIPYARDS ON PACIFIC

Washington, April 24 (INS)—In a formal report recommending construction of 54 naval supply vessels at a cost of $175,000,000, the House Naval Affairs Committee today urged the necessity of shipyards on the Pacific Coast.

The measure includes a provision allowing West Coast shipyards a differential of 6 per cent in bidding for construction of the ships.

THE SENATOR

5 Million Lure in Middlesex

THE SENATOR:

"Timmie," says The Senator when he comes in, "how would you like to have $5,000,000 to play with."

"Boo, Senator, to you," says Timmie, who is ready for almost anything The Senator says these times and who knows there is always some swerve behind it.

"Well, Timmie," declares The Senator, holding up three fingers —like this—"I find out today what the real interest in politics over in Middlesex County is, and this real interest is $5,000,000 which the county commissioners have to play with every year. This is a very nice plaything, Timmie."

Timmie is busy going through the motions of pouring. The Senator's three fingers and Timmie just grunts, so The Senator resumes in these words:

"Just now, Timmie, the Republicans have the $5,000,000 as a plaything, with two on the board and only one Democrat, and the big fight this year, and one which is being built up very quietly, is to get a second Democ-rat on the board by licking Commissioner Walter Wardell of Cambridge and Nat Bowditch of Framingham, who outvote Commissioner Tom Brennan of Medford at every move.

"Getting Brennan in there last year, Timmie, broke into the Middlesex Republican set for the first time and now the Democrats are going after real blood."

"Why that is a very nice ambition on the part of the Democrats, Senator," says Timmie, "and I even go so far as to say the Democrats have no little fortitude to contemplate such a bold ambition."

These high words by Timmie make The Senator look at him a little suspicious, but Timmie keeps a straight face and The Senator resumes:

Fat's on Fire

"In fact, Timmie," says The Senator, "one of the greatest political wars in the history of Middlesex County is on the fire this year, and the Democrats intend to wreck the G. O. P. stronghold right down all along the line.

"Two Republicans up for re-election this year in important jobs are Loring P. Jordan, register of probate, and John R. MacKinnon, clerk of courts. I have an idea MacKinnon may get in without much trouble, as even many Democrats like him. But they want the other job."

"There is a lad in here a little while ago, Senator," says Timmie, "and he tells me James A. Roche, who is the former boy mayor of Everett, becomes a candidate for Congress this year."

The Senator has his three-finger glass up to his dial, ready for the quick throw, but he puts it down fast at this, and he says hastily:

"It is a peculiar thing, Timmie, but I am just coming to this. It only shows you, Timmie, what coincidence will do. Jim Roche will be a candidate for Congress this fall, and he runs, I understand, as a matter of winning vindication for the little unpleasantness of a few weeks ago."

"There is something else another lad tells me, Senator," says Timmie, holding himself in from laughing, "and this is that Paul Edwards, the WPA administrator, is about ready to step out and there are three men on the fire to succeed him."

These Three?

"And who are these three, Timmie?" asks The Senator. He tries to look careless, which is a very difficult try for The Senator at any time, what with his roundman appearance and his dignity and all.

"Well, Senator," says Timmie, "the lad tells me they are former Mayor Andy Peters and ex-Civil Service Commissioner Jim Hurley of Marlboro and Charles Birmingham, who is regional director of the housing commission and once a B. C. Alumni head."

"I am glad indeed that you get these names straight, Timmie, even if you are a stooge."

Now Timmie, who is as smart as they come, can see that The Senator is faking and that he has no more idea of this tip than Ulysses S. Grant, but Timmie does not say anything because it is often that Timmie gets much satisfying amusement out of merely laughing to himself.

"I place a small wager, Timmie," says The Senator, "that you get no tip that Samuel Weiner, the law pleader of Worchester, waits any day now for the word from Governor Jim that he has regular office hours in an important state job."

"No, Senator, I do not hear that," agrees Timmie, "although I do know that Lawyer Sam is one of Governor Jim's campaign directors two years ago in Roxbury, Dorchester and Mattapan."

"Then you should keep your ears open, Timmie," chides The Senator sternly, "and do not expect me to give you all your tips."

So saying, The Senator finishes his three fingers and hurries away in an small hurry, which is a dead give-away on The Senator, who always hurries away when he is concerned or the cards are not falling right.

PUERTO RICAN BILL PUSHED IN SENATE

Washington, April 24 (AP)—Declaring that his proposal had the support of the Roosevelt administration, Senator Tydings (D.), Maryland, today pushed a pian under which Puerto Rico could obtain independence if it desired. He accused Puerto Ricans of being ungrateful to the United States.

Introducing a bill for a referendum in which the island people would determine their future status, Tydings referred to recent disturbances, in which Puerto Ricans seeking independence were said to have taken part.

These troubles were followed by the assassination of Colonel E. Francis Riggs, insular chief of police.

Tydings' bill resembles the Philippines independence act.

Under the Tydings bill, a plebiscite would be held in November, 1937. If the Puerto Ricans voted for independence, a commonwealth government, which would retain links with the United States, would be set up for four years. After that the islanders would be granted complete freedom.

Parker Sees Landon Sweep In G.O.P. State Primary

How You Vote for Kansan

CLUB EXPECTS 13TH DISTRICT BATTLE

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

More than 70 per cent of the Republicans who go to the polls in next Tuesday's party primaries will write in the name of "Alfred M. Landon" in the space set apart by law on the ballot for the expression of preference for President of the United States, in the opinion of President Edwin F. Parker of the "Landon for President Club."

The Landon for President movement in Massachusetts as an organized force originated early in January. Seven young men, two of them former Kansans organized it and obtained a charter from the state. None of them had had experience in practical politics.

But were agreed that something must be done for the youth of the country in view of the tremendous mortgage which the New Deal was piling up for their generation to bear as well as others to come.

Having started the club, the group found to their amazement that almost overnight they were breaking the crest of an imminent spontaneous response from the Republican voters of the state. It was not confined to Republicans either but served as a rallying point for the many Democrats out of sympathy with the Roosevelt policies.

FAITH IN KANSAN

From all sections of the state enrollments in the club have come testifying to the faith of the enrollers in Governor Landon as one who can win in November and restore constitutional government.

Endorsements of Governor Landon which have appeared in the press from time to time have included such outstanding leaders of the Republican party of this state as former Governor Alvan T. Fuller and former Lieutenant Governor Gaspar G. Bacon.

"We believe the voters will take full advantage of the opportunity they have to write Governor Landon's name in on their ballots as their choice for President on Tuesday," President Parker stated.

"By this means they will be directing the delegates who are to go to Cleveland to the convention as to their preference—a preference which the delegates will unquestionably follow.

'MIGHTY VOICE' NEEDED

"The size of the Landon vote in Massachusetts on Tuesday is of the utmost importance. We have reached the stage where a mighty voice speaking from Massachusetts may well be the determining influence on the other states of the Union yet to hold their primaries and make positive the nomination of Governor Landon in June. Massachusetts voters may in fact be naming the next President of the United States.

"An overwhelming Landon vote, moreover, will weld together a splendid feeling between Massachusetts and those western states where Governor Landon is held in the highest esteem. Over a period of years there has been a growing misunderstanding between these states of the West and those of the East.

"Here is a wonderful opportunity to wipe away differences and grievances, whether actual or imaginary, and promote a new friendly intersectional spirit which will be not only of mutual advantage but of lasting benefit of the national as a whole.

'ONE WHO CAN WIN'

"If 70 per cent or more as now seems probable of the Republican voters of Massachusetts write in the name of 'Alfred M. Landon' on their ballots on Tuesday, they will have voted to nominate the one candidate who can win in November and the one candidate best fitted to represent them as President."

Mrs. Mildred W. Raeder, of 39 Court street, Dedham, rises to beg you to write the name of Alfred M. Landon on the ballot of the Republican party in the space set aside for presidential preference. If you'd like to vote for delegates and alternates who favor Landon put your X in the small circles as indicated.

There are 14 towns and two cities in this district. They include Avon, Braintree, Brockton, Canton, Dedham, Dover, Holbrook, Milton, Natick, Needham, Norwood, Quincy, Randolph, Stoughton, Westwood and Weymouth.

In the 9th congressional district, Colin J. MacLeod of Brookline and Mrs. Elizabeth A. Perkins of Watertown contesting the so-called Richardson group of delegate candidates there. MacLeod and Mrs. Perkins, both prominent Republicans, are openly supporting the Landon candidacy. Mrs. Perkins was the first president of the Women's Republican Club of Watertown. MacLeod is a former revenue agent in charge of New England.

RICHARDSON MUM

Richardson, a former intimate of President Hoover, has so far declined to tell the voters on his district where he stands in regard to presidential candidates other than to say that the candidates should be left free to decide on whom they think will be the best man at the convention.

Atty. Cohen Seeks Place as Delegate

Pledged to support candidates who will help reduce the burden of taxation, Attorney Benjamin Cohen of 156 Callender street, Dorchester, is a candidate for delegate to the Democratic pre-primary convention.

Cohen, a member of the bar for 10 years, is running in Ward 14. The election of delegates takes place next Tuesday.

"I believe the Democratic party in Massachusetts should do everything in its power to relieve home-owners and other taxpayers and to resist the steadily increasing burden of taxes in this nation," he said.

2 Slain by Spanish Anti-Church Mobs

Madrid, April 24 (AP)—Political violence swept several small towns today.

A civil guard in Lebrija, Province of Sevilla, was clubbed to death by extremists who attempted to burn a church.

Others headed by the mayor of Ubrique assaulted the friars of a convent and college. A guard was killed when he tried to disperse the mob.

Wants Bed Back

Soviets Doom Man Who Executed 11

Leningrad, U. S. S. R., April 24 (AP)—A railway court today sentenced T. Povoryaeff, convicted of sabotage, to death after presentation of testimony that, as head of a White Guard regiment in the civil war of 1919, he ordered the execution of 11 Bolsheviks.

The court found that he hid his identity after the White defeat and obtained employment in the locomotive plant at Kandalashka where for years he carried on acts of sabotage.

CUBAN PAPER ASKS HEARST TRIBUTE

Havana, April 24 (US)—Mario G. Menocal, twice president of Cuba, through his newspaper, La Discusion, yesterday urged that the Cuban government decorate William Randolph Hearst because of the part he played through his newspapers in helping the Cuban struggle for independence.

La Discusion took Cuba to "task for not having shown its gratitude to Mr. Hearst. The newspaper stated:

"Thirty-eight years ago, the United States, through its Congress, declared before the world: 'Cuba was and has a right to be free and independent.'

"It was a noble gesture and we express our gratitude to the great North American nation.

"Speaking last night, our great chieftain, General Menocal, recalled a forgotten duty which should have been rectified long ago, namely the matter of Mr. Hearst, the great North American newspaper magnate, who threw all his newspapers and other resources into the battle to make Cuba independent.

"Until now Cuba has forgotten to show gratitude. We still have time and, now that we have given so many national decorations, the least we could do would be to remember him likewise.

"La Discusion regrets this forgetfulness and offers Mr. Hearst this testimonial of imperishable gratitude."

LANDON STEADY, SAYS ALLEN

New York, April 24 (US)—Governor Alfred M. Landon of Kansas is "the outstanding figure in the American political scheme today," Henry J. Allen, Kansas publisher and editor, declared.

Speaking last night at the annual dinner of the Kansas Society of New York, held at Town Hall, Allen predicted the Republican party "will win with Landon" next November. He said:

"Governor Landon is not a showman; he is not a radio artist. But is steady, sure, reliable, and he is a natural to demobilize the monstrosities of the present administration."

The publisher lauded Landon's pay-as-you-go program as a challenge to the country and "a terrific reversal in government." He continued:

"I want to say to you Kansans here that you don't need to worry about Landon. He fits into the picture as a natural expression that steadiness, courage and common sense are a challenge to this administration."

CONDEMN ATTACK ON PRESS FREEDOM

PUBLISHERS SEE DANGERS

New York, April 24 (US)—In militant mood the newspaper publishers of the country yesterday voted unanimously to condemn the Black Senate lobby investigating committee for its recent attack on the freedom of the press.

Three other resolutions, dealing with the assaults by other governmental agencies on a free press, were adopted without dissenting voice.

Seeing grave danger to the country in governmental radio censorship, a special committee reported to the American Newspaper Publishers Association, which has been holding its 15th annual convention at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, demanding freedom of airways from political domination.

Action on the radio committee report was to be taken today at the closing session of the association convention.

COMMEND FIGHT FOR RIGHTS

The four resolutions, submitted by the special committee headed by Colonel Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, provided:

1—That the association commends those persons, who by their appeals to the courts to enforce their rights under the Constitution have helped to curb the illegal conduct of the (Black) committee and the (federal communications) commission and it further recommends that they and all other victims of the illegal acts of the Senate investigating committee and the federal communications commission seek civil damages from the agents of the committee and the members and employes of the commission for the trespasses against them, and demand the prosecution of all involved in the odious affair under the criminal statutes of the United States.

2—The American Newspaper Publishers Association congratulates the publishers of the Louisiana daily newspapers for their courageous and successful resistance to the attempt of a corrupt government to suppress that dissemination of information on public questions which is the first duty of a free press.

3—The association congratulates the Philadelphia Inquirer upon the vindication of its right to proper comment on suspicious official behavior.

4—That the press of this country should resist the attempts of such alliances in Minnesota or any other state to abridge the freedom of the press, whether the abridgement be attempted by lawlessness, legislation or by any other means.

'REPORTER FIRST G-MAN'

Discussing the "newspaper of tomorrow," at the dinner of the advertising bureau of the association, Dean Carl W. Ackerman, of the graduate school of journalism of Columbia University made a strong plea for protection of the newspaperman in his capacity as news gatherer. Ackerman said:

"Remember that a reporter was the first G-man; that reporters are the G-men of democracy and they deserve protection and security."

3 FLAG REBELS WIN AID OF N.Y. FOLK

Belchertown, April 24—The battle of a group of intellectuals in behalf of three poor children barred from school because they refused to salute the flag extended to New York today.

Professor Oliver W. Larkin, heading the defense committee for the children, announced he would confer with representatives of the Civil Liberties Union in New York, following his appeal to Education Commissioner James G. Reardon to lift the ban on readmission of the children to school.

The children, Dominic Opielonsky, 15, and his sisters, Sophie, 12, and Anna, 9, are under bail pending appeal of district court sentences to reform school. The father, Ignace, a member of Jehovah's Witnesses, which forbids salute of the flag or taking oaths of allegiance, has appealed a fine for not sending his children to school.

Professor Colston E. Warne, Amherst College, announced the defense committee had dropped plans to seek a writ of mandamus to force readmission of the children to school.

HOUSE SLASHES CURLEY BUDGET BY 10 MILLION

The House of Representatives wrote finis to a week of bitter wrangling today by passing and sending to the Senate a budget approximately $10,000,000 short of the figure Governor Curley says is needed for adequate administration of the State's affairs.

In the face of a sharp rebuff from a solid Republican bloc and insurgent members of his own party in the lower branch, Governor Curley optimistically awaits the commencement of Senate consideration on Monday.

The budget passes from House to Senate containing appropriations of $65,667,000.

The last faint hope of any substantial Democratic gains in the House faded when Republicans clinched matters in a parliamentary maneuver to block reconsideration.

Democratic hopes flared high as a roll call vote of 113 to 109 authorized an increase of $1,600,000 in the $3,000,000 appropriation for the public works department highway maintenance fund.

When it looked as though Governor Curley was to be granted one of his major demands, Republicans mobilized for action and carried a motion for reconsideration by the thin margin of 113 to 112.

UNPRECEDENTED

Speaker Leverett Saltonstall, in an almost unprecedented request, then asked members participating in subsequent roll-calls to rise from their seats as called.

The proposed increase was then defeated, 80 to 133.

A motion to make the increase $1,400,000 went down, 112 to 114.

An attempt to have Governor Curley's budget adopted in toto—a move which would have voided the preliminary deliberations of the ways and means committee and a week of House debate—was defeated, 88 to 130.

Spurred to action by two Curley messages sent in earlier in the day, Democrats put over increases of $14,700 for the alcohol board, $1400 for the hairdressers board and $10,300 for the state police.

FIRE TRUCK, CAR CRASH; 7 HURT

Providence, April 24—Five firemen and two motorists were injured today when Hose Truck 11 crashed into a coupe at Huntington avenue and Dexter street, wrecking both machines.

The heavy fire engine sped on out of control, after the smashup and piled up against a pole. Three ambulances, one of which happened to be passing at the time, carried the injured to the hospital.

Lieutenant George W. Garner, 60, was most seriously hurt. Firemen Thomas Hazelhurst, 45; Fred Gorman, 38, and James Crofton, 44, were hospitalized. The driver of the truck, William Bath, 36, was less seriously injured.

The two motorists, John H. Carr, 41, and John J. Flanagan, 25, both of West Warwick, were also carried away in ambulances.

Hose 31 apparatus was responding to a still alarm, a fence fire. Hose 15 had to be called to fight the blaze.

GIRL IN WILD AUTO CHASE

Taken at gunpoint after a wild chase through Dorchester, while a girl companion trembled in the seat beside him, Charles Eglin, 17, of Glenway street, Dorchester, faces charges of larceny of an automobile today.

Few minutes after William A. Rider of Beacon street, Brookline, had reported the car he had parked on Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury, was missing, Patrolmen Herbert Spencer and William Usher sighted the machine on Columbia road.

They forced the car to the curb after miles of chase and the girl was allowed to go when it was alleged that Eglin involved another youth in the alleged theft.

He had left his reputed accomplice and taken the car "to keep a date with the 16-year-old girl," police said he told them at Mattapan station.

AKRON PLANS BIGGEST ZEP IN WORLD

Akron, O., April 24 (AP)—Paul W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation, announced today engineers for the concern had drawn plans for a dirigible greater in size than Germany's giant of the air, the new Hindenburg.

The ship, he said, would be the largest in history, 850 feet long and 145 feet in diameter. This length would exceed that of the Hindenburg by 75 feet, he added.

Litchfield refused to say whether negotiations were under way for the sale of the proposed airship.

He asserted, however, that three eastern cities are now under consideration as the American terminus for permanent airship service between this country and Europe. He named these cities as Philadelphia, Alexandria, Va., and Richmond, Va.

The proposed transatlantic service, he continued, would "round out" the service offered by the Hindenburg.

2 Reprieved Hour Before Hanging

San Francisco, Cal., April 24 (AP)—Governor Merriam today reprieved Alexander MacKay, a British subject, and Joseph Kristy, an hour before the time set for their hanging at San Quentin prison.

He took the action in response to the request of the British government upon the urging of Secretary of State Hull.

MacKay and Kristy were to have died at 10 a. m. Pacific Standard Time (1 p. m. E. S. T.), for the kidnaping of prison officials in a futile attempt to escape from the penitentiary.

The stay of sentence is for 30 days.

Carolina Mill Moves to Taunton

Taunton, April 24—Here's a textile mill that is moving from the South up to New England, thus reversing the recent process.

Carl Stohn, Inc., will move its Charlotteville, N. C., plant to the old Taber mill in East Taunton. The company said that it expects to have an annual payroll of $300,000. Fancy brocaded cloth will be woven, dyed and finished here.

The Taber mill was acquired from Taunton, which had taken it over for non-payment of taxes. The purchase price, it was said, was $10,000. In 1928, the mill was valued at $400,000. The Stohn corporation has plants at Hyde Park, Boston, and in Granby, Que.

Quins Make Camera Go 'Round 'N' Film Comes Out...?

"HOLD EVERYTHING!"—Now for the real test! The "cameraman" is Quin Emilie. The instructor is Fred Davis. The spectator is Quin Annette! Everything in readiness! "Shoot" it! It might be well to mention that Mr. Davis is the lawful owner of this camera, but when he tries to recover his most-prized possession he'll find himself involved in not one, but five difficulties.

"CAMERA GOES 'ROUND and 'round," but just where the film will come out, when the mechanical-minded "quins" get through with it, is somewhat uncertain. Annette stands on guard (camera doesn't belong to them) while Cecile, Marie, Emilie and Yvonne begin their inspection. Nurse Leroux supervises.

Surely these five girls of Canada will know much about the camera—the cameramen and pictures long before they get out of their teens, for no children of the ages have been so frequently photographed. A history in pictures is the plan. No wonder the tots go for the cameras just as they would for toys.

Kisses Out With Onions, Girls Rule

New Orleans, April 24 (AP)—Newcomb College girls informed their favorites on the Tulane campus that if the male students wished second dates to charm the fair sex they must be intelligent and observe these "don'ts":

Don't kiss on the first date.
Don't be an athlete.
Don't eat onions.

In reply, Tulane date-seekers offered this set of charm catchers for the co-eds:

Play dumb, but be intelligent.
Don't try to make yourself the campus sweetheart.
Furnish your own cigarettes.
Kiss when you're in the mood.
No chiseling, and drink more beer.

POLICE STIFFEN "SHOW-UP"

Strict rules of procedure to govern the daily show-ups at police headquarters were laid down today by acting Superintendent Edward W. Fallon, to become effective at 8 a. m. tomorrow.

Under the new deal, all officers must have their prisoners checked into the show-up room, and must be with them by 8 a. m., as the doors then will be locked.

All officers bringing prisoners to the show-up must give their names on arrival to Sergeant Walter Driscoll, and tardiness will be reported to the officers' captains. Reprimands will come for the first offense, but for second and succeeding offenses there will be penalties.

Hereafter no officers or anyone else will be allowed to smoke in the show-up room and police jokers who have seated themselves in the front row and "wise-cracked" at the prisoners must leave their comedy outside.

Lose Sleep To Be Awake Mentally

Evanston, Ill., April 24 (AP)—Lack of sleep apparently speeds mental processes instead of slowing them, the Mid-Western Psychological Association was told today by three of its group.

White rats which had been kept awake continuously for 24 hours found their way out of mazes with "considerably greater efficiency than normally," three Washington University experimenters reported.

The psychologists, Dr. M. E. Bunch, Dr. A. Cole and Dr. J. Frerichs, added:

"The maze when mastered under this condition was retained (in the rats' memories) more effectively after an interval of two weeks than when it learned under ordinary conditions."

WIFE DIVORCED UNDER GUARD

In an atmosphere of tense watchfulness, a wife was granted a divorce today in probate court after attaches had received a tip that her husband intended to shoot her in court if she testified against him.

The tip was received by Court Officer Robert Culbert of Winthrop and the courtroom doors were guarded by court officers. Attaches of the courthouse superintendent's office were stationed in the corridor, and clerks from the register of probate's office were planted in the audience.

Nothing happened, however, while the wife testified before Judge Frederick J. Dillon, part of her testimony being a declaration that her husband once was in Dorchester court after allegedly brandishing a gun.

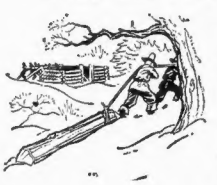
Why "PILGRIM" Ale?

A BIT OF HISTORY

Since the sensational entrance of Pilgrim Ale into the market, hundreds of people have asked why the name "Pilgrim" was selected.

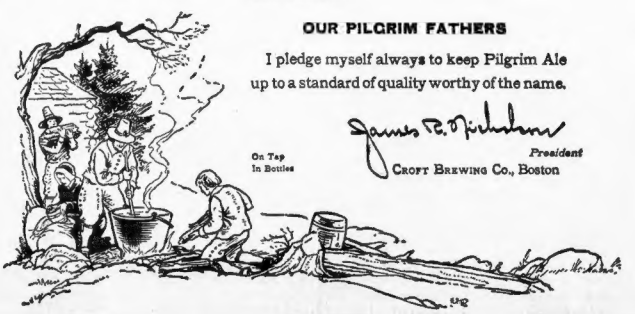
The answer is an easy one.

New England is the home of ale brewing in America. The first ale brewed in New England, which means the first ale brewed in America, was brewed by the Pilgrims when they landed at Plymouth Rock. As a matter of fact, they settled there because their stock of ale was getting low and they wanted to brew some more.



In "The Journal of the Pilgrims" it says: "We could not take time for further search or considerations, our victuals being much spent, especially our beer."

How appropriate, then, that New England's outstanding ale, which means America's outstanding ale, should be named after America's first brewers—



OUR PILGRIM FATHERS

I pledge myself always to keep Pilgrim Ale up to a standard of quality worthy of the name.

100,000 TO SEE ROOSEVELT "NOTIFIED"

Washington, April 24 (AP)—Democratic leaders arranging June convention plans today considered holding a great open air ceremony at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, to notify President Roosevelt of his renomination.

Party leaders estimated 100,000 persons could watch the ceremony and hear the President's speech of acceptance in the University of Pennsylvania athletic field near the convention hall.

While New Deal chieftains traveled to tomorrow's meeting in Philadelphia to complete arrangements for the June convention, there were developments also in the opposition camps.

Senator Borah of Idaho, candidate for the Republican nomination, sent a telegram to Colonel Frank Knox of Chicago, another candidate, saying that efforts were being made to persuade Illinois delegates t "disregard the wishes of the people."

The senator asked Colonel Knox if he approved of such efforts.

Borah said friends of Knox were trying to get votes for the publisher from delegates in districts carried by the Idaho senator in the primary April 14.

Knox, in New York, said he had not yet received the telegram and declined to comment.

N. J. Jobless Still Hold Chamber, Solons Cancel Call

Trenton, N. J., April 24 (AP)—New Jersey Assembly leaders, their legislative chamber held in siege for three days by jobless men and women demanding resumption of State relief payments, suddenly cancelled a session which had been called for today to deal with the problem.

Paul R. Williams, Assembly clerk, sent telegrams to members that the session of the House called for 10 A. M. had been cancelled. No reason was given.

Several assemblymen and House attaches had arrived at the assembly chamber before learning of the postponement.

JOBLESS HOLD FIRM

The chamber, which had been occupied by the unemployed since Tuesday except when they moved to the Senate, again was thronged with the jobless.

The telegrams merely said thee session was cancelled "upon instructions of the speaker," Marcus W. Newcomb. At Dr. Newcomb's Pemberton home, it was said he had gone to Newark for a legislative conference.

The assembly, which had been in recess, had agreed previously to meet today in response to demands that it do something quickly to replenish exhausted relief funds.

DEMANDS WIRED

After learning of the postponement of the session, leaders of the jobless drew up a resolution promising to remain encamped "in ever-increasing numbers and improved morale" and await the return of the "Sissy Legislature."

The jobless ordered this and another demand for action wired to a conference of legislators in Newark.

The resolution charged the Assembly with taking a "run out powder" and said "we resent the slur in non-recognition of the Governor's request (for the session) and our demands."

The other message demanded immediate Senate action on a luxury tax and Assembly action on corporation and income taxes, adding that "the public are long suffering, but even the worm will turn. A word to the wise is sufficient."

Husband Rewed, She Gets Decree

Although her husband obtained a Mexican divorce, has remarried and has two children, Mrs. Clara S. Keyes, of Brookline, was granted an uncontested divorce today in Probate Court at Dedham from DeForest Keyes, last heard of in Miami, Fla.

Mrs. Keyes charged unfaithfulness, and said she and Keyes were married at Oneonta, N. Y., in 1902. She left him in 1916, she testified, and came to Brookline to live.

In 1932 she learned of the Mexican divorce and that he had married one, Sarah A. Robinson in Miami.

J. M. DELANEY RITES PLANNED

Funeral arrangements are to be completed today for James M. Delaney, 64, of Inman street, Cambridge, father of James J. Delaney of the Boston Evening American staff.

He succumbed at his home following a short illness. Well known in Cambridge, where he resided for 45 years, he was a member of the Cambridge Council, K. of C., St. John Court, M. C. O. F., and was superintendent of St. Mary's Catholic Association building.

In addition to his son James, he is survived by two other sons, the Rev. Cyril R. Delaney, S. J., and the Rev. Ralph B. Delaney, S. J., both of Weston College, and three daughters, Sister Eleanor Joseph and Sister Ann Cyril, both of the Notre Dame Order, and Miss Rita F. Delaney.

Autopsy on Girl Called 'Formality'

The post-mortem examination into the sudden death today of 12-year-old Mary Gallant of Fifield street, Dorchester, is a mere formality, according to Medical Examiner William Watters.

He said th eonly reason he is making the examination is that the child died suddenly without a definite cause established and not in the presence of a doctor.

Riot Deaths In Holy Land Total 31

Jerusalem, April 24 (U8)—Jewish families of Hebron, chief sufferers of the bloody 1929 outbreaks, were evacuated from their homes and brought to Jerusalem today as authorities listed 31 dead in the Anti-Semitic rioting that has terrorized the Holy Land for 12 days.

Tension increased at Jaffa, where fire of unknown origin seriously damaged the railroad station and a number of stores. Jaffa police prevented Arab demonstrations.

Authorities announced that since the beginning of the rioting 16 Jews and five Arabs have been slain. The injured included 26 Jews taken to hospitals and 49 treated for minor injuries; 31 Arabs taken to hospitals and 49 treated for minor injuries.

Don Juan Garner A Forgotten Man

Brownsville, Tex., April 24 (AP)—John Garner used to be known by his first name to every sunburned citizen along the Texas border.

An aged Spanish-American in Hidalgo County, unable to produce a birth certificate in conjunction with his application for an old age pension, told Frank Crow, district supervisor, of two men who had known him for more thag 50 years and could swear to his age. One lives in Edinburg.

"And then," Crow quoted the old man, "there's Don Juan Garner, who used to be Congressman, but I've lost track of him lately."

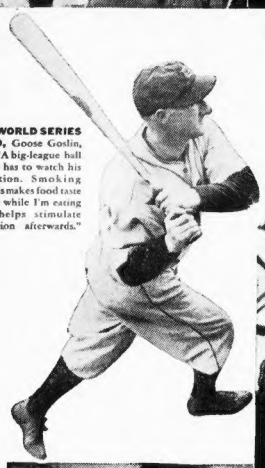
You need good digestion to face the nervous strain of modern living!



1935 WORLD SERIES HERO, Goose Goslin, says: "A big-league ball player has to watch his digestion. Smoking Camels makes food taste better while I'm eating and helps stimulate digestion afterwards."

"I HAVE TO EAT in 30 minutes—and then go to work catching red-hot rivets, standing on narrow beams hundreds of feet in the air," says Harry Fisher, steel worker. "Smoking Camels helps my digestion, gives me a swell 'lift.' And they've got real flavor!"

Smoking Camels Assists Digestion to Proceed Normally and Stimulates a Sense of Ease and Good Feeling

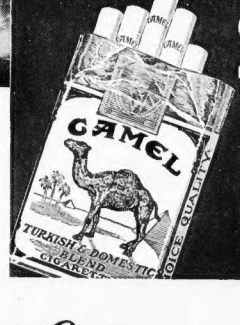
When people are tired, worried, or nervous, digestion is apt to be affected. The flow of digestive fluids slows up. But when these important fluids function normally, good digestion follows after.

Science now recognizes that smoking Camels has a favorable influence in increasing the flow of these digestive fluids. The increase brought about by smoking Camels has actually been measured by scientists. Thus, there are sound, definite reasons why Camels add to the enjoyment of your meals.

Camels are supremely mild—never get on the nerves or tire your taste. Enjoy Camels as much as you like...for their good cheer and "lift"... for their rare and delicate flavor! Smoke Camel's costlier tobaccos for digestion's sake. They set you right!

THE TERRACED MARINE DINING ROOM of the Edgewater Beach Hotel, Chicago. Those who dine on tempting food... at leisure... with music... and gay companionship... also appreciate Camels for their aid to digestion. Camels make food taste better—help you to enjoy it more. "Good times and good tobacco go together," says Fred (left), maître d'hôtel of the Marine Dining Room. "Here, where fine foods are prepared and served for those who like the best—so many of our guests smoke Camels. They are immensely popular."

SHE FEEDS THOUSANDS DAILY. Miss Lenora Flinn, dietitian, says: "How nice that smoking Camels helps one through the strain of modern living. With me, it's always Camels! Smoking Camels during meals and after stimulates digestion, causing increased flow of digestive fluids. Camels never jangle my nerves."



COSTLIER TOBACCOS

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

NAFF DRIVEN FROM TOWN

How do the Communists mislead Americans into joining their movement to destroy the United States?

What are they taught in the Communist schools to do once they join the movement?

What happens to them when they obey the secret instructions to incite riot and violence given by Communist leaders?

These questions and many others are answered by Clay Naff, a former well-to-do resident of Arizona, he fell into the Red web became Communist candidate for governor in that state and was sentenced to prison for inciting to riot and violence.

It was not until then that Naff realized how sinister was the movement of which he had become a participant.

A series of repentant articles written in jail and entitled, "Why I Have Quit Communism" was the result.

Naff has just completed his sentence and been released.

The following article is the birth of the series.

ARTICLE VI

By CLAY NAFF

Former Communist candidate for Governor of Arizona

It was the village of Litchfield, Arizona, which provided an unexpected climax to the wave of cotton pickers' strikes sweeping the state.

Omitting the details of my inciting activity there, I will tell of the climax. It came with a bang when a committee of farmers called on me. They wanted to be sure of their ground, when they arrived.

Clay Naff

"You're Clay Naff, the Communist leader of this strike?" their spokesman asked me.

"Yeah," I admitted it, not quite certain what was happening.

"All right, the——MARCH!"

At this moment appeared a long, black double barrelled shotgun which they swear to goodness looked like a cannon! And the farmer who held it looked like some giant.

The double muzzle of it was jammed—not touched—into the small of my back and the command to march given again.

And I marched! I didn't argue at all. I marched. As I walked, I began to get my mental bearings a little. I told myself this was the end. It was just a question of the irrigation ditch into which they would dump my bullet-riddled body.

But they didn't shoot.

I just marched for four miles with that shotgun muzzle wearing a callous on my back. Then I was told a few things—and made to go my way.

If they had killed me, Communism would have profited by having me a martyr to a cause. As it was they just scared the living Hades out of me and left me with the definite, positive threat that I'd better stop hell-raising in their community.

A police photo of Manuel Quelquedose, whose activities in fomenting radical disturbances in the Southwest were alleged to be under Moscow direction, operating through Mexico.

A Pepper-Upper

I had worked myself sick as leader of the cotton pickers' strikes. Both strikes ended without any material gains for the pickers, but we Communists were still trying to stir up trouble.

Night and day I had been at it for weeks. I was now "black balled" all over the state. Papers repeatedly had printed my picture and name as the Communist leader, often claiming that I was an outsider sent in to stir up trouble. I was out of money, had no job and couldn't get one now, because I was a despised Red.

A harum-scarum Irishman named Callahan was sent into Arizona about that time by the Communist party to pep us up. He had been posing as a peace league organizer, or something like that, but it had been just a cover for his Communist activities.

A lot of influential persons are ready to deny Communist work behind their apparent jobs. There was even a Methodist preacher in Phoenix, very bright chap, who was sanctimoniously holding one job while really doing all he could to promote the Communist International party. Some of his own church members later got wise to him, I am told, and ran him out of town.

"Inspiration"

Callahan came over to "inspire" us.

I was low, and needed inspiration. He gave it to me by an unexpected method. He got out his oil can and squirted soft words all over me, then informed me that I was to be the Communist Party's candidate for governor of Arizona.

Hot dog, candidate for Governor!

I suppose there is nothing more flattering than to have an apparently important nomination handed to you. I swelled up again, and felt the urge to "do my duty by my cause."

If I had done even half an hour of calm thinking (I can think easily now after nearly two years in the Arizona State Prison, plus a few preliminary shocks) I would have seen the trap.

The Communists are not a political party primarily.

They are a military organization. They admittedly do not hope to elect the American or any other government by the ballot. They are actually trying to do it by FORCE!

They funded huge civil units there so to get the work-mass of America so stirred up, so bamboozled and mixed in persistent propaganda, that they will rise in bloody civil war against the government, overthrow it, and establish a Soviet Dictatorship exactly as Russia has done.

Of course I had no chance to be elected governor.

But I want to be sure of that at the time. Moreover I felt it a great cause, and even if I lost I would have publicized Communism and fed my ego.

I began with renewed energy to make speeches wherever I could. I would pop up on a bench or a box and make an oration on the slightest provocation. That's Communist style. I was a good 'salesman' for Communism.

ADVISED TO EAT BRAN FOR HER CONSTIPATION*

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Helps Miss Hanson

Read this enthusiastic, voluntary letter: "Just a line to let you know how much I appreciate Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. I was troubled with constipation.* I asked my doctor what to do. He said to eat bran.

"I tried other brands but they weren't so good, so I tried Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, and it is just wonderful. It makes delicious muffins, too."—Miss Agnes Hanson, 400 N. Cicero Ave., Chicago, Ill.

ALL-BRAN provides mild "bulk"—missing in the average meal. This delicious cereal also furnishes vitamin B and iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN absorbs moisture, and gently exercises and cleanses the system. It is often more effective than that found in fruits and vegetables, as it does not break down within the body. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and iron.

Isn't this natural food pleasanter than patent medicines? Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily. If not relieved, see your doctor.

Sold by all grocers. ALL-BRAN is much more effective than part-bran products. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

*Constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in ratio.

Eastern Horse Club Calls Off Annual June Race Meet

By BETTY ALDEN

A FAMOUS BOSTON institution is about to take another furlough . . . which is a way of saying that the Eastern Horse Club, 45-year-old association of socially prominent horse lovers and sportsmen, has decided to call off its annual June race meet at Clyde Park in Framingham . . .

Once before the Eastern Horse Club has stood aloof during its existence . . . its meetings were suspended for a ten year interval because of the war and resulting unsettled conditions. But in 1926 they were resumed again with all the dash and color of a miniature Grand National at Aintree . . .

Since then things have changed considerably and the stand still Bay State long an exponent of sports for sports sake has adopted part-mutuel betting and the world rotund the chief cause, was diverted for purposes entered from the gallant hunger . . . on the governors of the Eastern race called off this year's meet but perhaps the next and the next . . . but they have not dissolved the organization, and the members cherish the hope that soon again they will be able to stage the one big New England steeplechase meet which rivals those held at Meadowbrook and Aiken . . .

Mrs. Richard Thompson

For Eastonians a visit to be able once more to tumble out of bed at the crack of dawn and gather with the dewy fairways of The Country Club to greet their old hunting friends from all over the country, while they watch the schooling . . . and once again to see the freshlimbed hunters, carrying the racing colors of such famous sportsmen as Ambrose Clark and Henry Vaughan, come pounding in under the wire to win fresh honors for their stables . . . just as their sires and dams did in days gone by . . .

* * *

At next winter's coming out parties, two of the debs will have lots of fun keeping the stag line guessing as to which is which . . . for Betsy and Mimi Van Antwerp, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Van Antwerp of Salem, will be making their debuts . . . and a great deal of their charm is in the fact that they are just as much alike in looks as their mother and aunt, Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall Tuckerman, Jr., are also alike in their sisters . . . Mrs. Van Antwerp is the former Cynthia Sargent and Mrs. Tuckerman was Lucy Sargent . . .

One of the nice parties which enlivened the last few days before Louisa Hopkins becomes Mrs. Dr. Michael E. Murray, was a luncheon given by Mrs. Jewell Colt at the home of her mother, Mrs. Piney Jewell, in Medford. The Hopkins-Murray wedding is taking place tomorrow at Weehawken, the Hopkins family home in Dover . . .

Morning Musicale Subscriptions in Demand

THESE ARE BUSY DAYS for Mrs. John W. Myers and her co-chairmen on the Boston Morning Musicales committee . . . for this is the season when those persons who wish to have their subscriptions to the series of morning concerts which is always an important part of Boston's musical and social life, have an opportunity to send in the records of their subscriptions . . .

In fact if you are not forehanded enough to apply for renewals before May 1 you may have to forfeit your seats to one of the several hundred women on the waiting list for this outstanding series of concerts . . .

Mrs. Myers' co-chairmen are Mrs. A. Barr Comstock of Dedham, whose particular job is to supervise the advertising committee, Mrs. John A. Greene, Mrs. Theodore T. Whitney, Jr., and Mrs. H. Parker Worthington.

The Musicales benefit the Boston School of Occupational Therapy, one of the city's most beneficial schools for handicaped children therefore a great many women are especially anxious to do their part in assisting in its growth and maintenance . . .

ETHIOPIA TRUCE PLAN BRANDED ITALIAN 'LIE'

Addis Ababa, April 24 (AP)—An Ethiopian government spokesman declared today his nation would fight the Italian invaders to the last man.

Even if Addis Ababa falls he asserted, the war will be carried on with guerrilla tactics.

Italian reports that Ethiopian officials had decided to send a mission to Italian Marshal Pietro Badoglio, bearing a white flag, were declared "intentionally false."

Emphasis was laid by observers upon the presence in Addis Ababa of Crown Prince Asfa Wosan, who discussed with the cabinet and tribal chieftains defense plans for the capital.

The northern Ethiopian army, under Emperor Haile Selassie, was said to have "endangered" Dessye, new Italian headquarters, and to have blasted out whole sections of the highway down which the Italians were pressing towards Addis Ababa.

France Agrees to Study Dardanelles Proposal

Paris, April 24 (AP)—France agreed to discuss with other signers of the Lausanne Treaty Turkey's request for permission to fortify the Dardanelles.

The French note handed to the Turkish ambassador, however, said the procedure for negotiations could be decided only after France "studied" the question.

Italians Seize Town 165 Miles From Addis Ababa

(Copyright, 1936, by Associated Press)

Rome, April 24—The advance of the main body of the Northern Italian army on Ethiopia's capital, Addis Ababa, has begun, Marshal Pietro Badoglio reported today in a communique.

He announced the occupation of Uorra Ilu, about 38 miles south of Dessye, on the road to the capital.

Today's was the first communique mentioning a general advance against Addis Ababa from Dessye, 165 miles northeast of the capital and former headquarters of Emperor Haile Selassie.

Britain to Quiz Hitler About Peace Proposals

London, April 24 (AP)—A questionnaire to be submitted to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler for clarification of his peace proposals probably will be sent to Berlin at the end of next week, an authoritative source said today.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, as liaison man for the Locarno powers in the negotiations arising from Germany's denunciation of the Locarno Pact and remilitarization of the Rhineland was devoting his personal attention to the question.

The French Embassy has been in contact with the British Foreign Office.

WOMAN FREED IN KIDNAPING

Allentown, Pa., April 24 (INS)—Following the release of an unidentified woman about 45 years old, police today expressed belief that Richard D. Taylor, 45-year-old washing machine salesman of Akron, O., played a "Lone Wolf" part in the short-lived kidnaping of Henry T. Koch, 10, son of a local department store executive.

The woman, whose name was withheld, was freed after grilling by detectives convinced them that she knew Taylor only "slightly." At first suspected as an accomplice in the abortive $20,000 snatch attempt the woman admitted riding to Akron with Taylor two nights ago, investigators revealed, where Taylor planned to get the money from a relative.

Taylor, police learned, left Akron two weeks ago with his wife for New York, but insisted his wife knew nothing of the kidnap plot.

While ten-year-old Henry, who freed himself from bonds and set police on the trail of his captor in an amazing exhibition of coolheadedness, showed no effect of his experience, Taylor face prosecution under state kidnaping laws.

"It was a lone job," Taylor insisted. "I was a fool to do it."

3 Win Ten-Day Battle With Sea

Honolulu, April 24 (AP)—A story of battling heavy seas in a leaking 32-foot ketch was told here today by Captain George Dibbern and two companions, one of them a woman, upon arrival from the Marquesas Islands.

A storm overtook them five days out and, during the last 10 days of the cruise, Dibbern and his shipmates, Miss Eileen Morris and Roy Murdock, both of New Zealand, were forced to bail the ship to keep afloat.

Voice, Light Tests

300 N. E. Youth, Girls Take First Step on Path to Filmland Fame

Begin To Pick Cast

LEONARD DE MENNE EDYTHE REILLY MIMI WALSHUK JEANNE MARQUETTE LORENA RICER

The tests are on. Voice and light tests for the movie, "It Happened in Boston." The new cast is being picked under the auspices of the Boston Evening American and Loew theaters. Leonard De Menne, director, is showing Edythe Reilly of Roslindale, at the "mike;" Mimi Walshuk, Mattapan; Jeanne Marquette, Brighton, and Lorena Ricer of Jamaica Plain how to talk or sing at a "mike."

'SHOOT' FILM HERE

Amateurs Rehearse Roles

The cameras will begin to grind tomorrow on "It Happened in Boston," talking picture for local amateur talent being sponsored by the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser and Loew's State and Orpheum theaters.

An exterior scene is to be taken at Commerce high school. A fraternity sequence will be "shot" at the Hotel Bradford.

From a host of applicants, 300 were selected yesterday for further tests by Leonard A. De Menna, director, and Max Allentuck, casting director.

There were uneasy moments aplenty as the army of hopefuls paraded into the spotlight to undergo voice tests. In contrast with those who carried on with the eclat of professionals, there were many whom nervousness inspired to stuttering and blushing.

As soon as the preliminary tests were over, rehearsals were commenced under the guidance of the director.

Exact time for the filming of the scenes at Commerce high school and the Hotel Bradford will be announced in early editions of tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

Haverhill Forms Flood Aid Group

Haverhill, April 24—Hoping to provide the aid which existing relief agencies are not at present able to furnish to flood victims, a group headed by the Rev. Norman J. Raison, president of the Haverhill Ministers' Association, has been organized.

It was pointed out that the group had no criticism of existing relief agencies but that there was a need for aid over and above what they have been thus far able to supply.

Actress Burial To Be in Bedford

New York, April 24—Alexandra Carlisle, renowned actress who was found dead in a hotel here, apparently the victim of a heart attack, will be buried in Shawsheen cemetery, Bedford, Mass., according to relatives.

It is there that her second husband, Dr. Albert Pfeiffer, former official of the Massachusetts department of health, is buried.

The actress married Dr. Pfeiffer in London in 1912, forsaking temporarily a notable stage career to live at Bedford and Boston.

NEW DAVIES PICTURE

Star at Best in 'Hearts Divided'

New York, April 24 (INS)—Jack Wallis, production manager for Warner Brothers Pictures, arrived from Hollywood today with good tidings of the company's three new pictures, "Anthony Adverse," "Green Pastures" and "Hearts Divided."

The last of these features Marion Davies, and it is Wallis' belief that the popular star will win new laurels for her work.

"She is at her best," he said.

In "Hearts Divided" Miss Davies, in the role of Betsy Patterson, a Baltimore belle, sings for the first time a French song. The story deals with the Louisiana Purchase.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallis (Louise Fazenda) will sail for Europe May 1 to spend several weeks on a business holiday. Mrs. Wallis has an important role in the current showing of "I Married a Doctor," with Pat O'Brien.

"'Adverse' is magnificent," said Wallis. "It took a year to produce, using about 8000 actors, [illegible] sets and 100 speaking parts. We put a happy ending to it, with Hervey Allen's approval. 'Green Pastures' is as fine. Our new experiment in road-showing these pictures, just as they did with 'Ben Hur' back in the old days, is proving just as successful as it did with stage shows."

NAZIS TRAINING 3000 HITLERS OF FUTURE

Croessinsee, Pomerania Germany, April 24 (AP)—All future Hitlers must jump from airplanes in parachutes to prove the bravery of the nation, according to a German news bureau release today at the moment Reichsfuehrer Hitler attended the opening exercises of one of three castles set aside for training aspirants to leadership of the party and state.

Robert Ley, as the Nazi party's head of the political division, ceremoniously handed over Croessinsee Castle to Hitler, at the same time stating that the castles of Vogelsang in the Eifel Mountains and of Sonthofen, Bavaria, also were placed at the party's disposal.

Sport will occupy the center of the three year curricula in the Three Castles which, when in full swing, will have 1000 aspirants each.

The first 500 already are selected to commence training in Vogelsang forthwith and the other two castles at present are used for short term Nazi courses.

One year will be spent in each castle, thereby bringing the pupils in contact with three different sections of Germany.

Eight hundred Nazi district leaders, all state leaders or statthalters and Nazi Reichleaders as well as representatives of Germany's war force attended the opening.

CHAPTER 29

His black eyes moved swiftly from her throat to her wrists and fingers which were all bare.

"What women doesn't?" She shrugged her dainty shoulders, making a little move with her lips, adding: "Only some are fated to have them, and some are not."

"Meaning yourself?"

"Naturally."

"Why wouldn't you have them?"

She shrugged again. "Diamonds don't grow on trees."

[illegible]

"Handsome's" Offer

[illegible]

"And the [illegible] forget them [illegible] sarcasm.

"Why not?" [illegible] young man [illegible] world?"

She [illegible] for a long [illegible] heartily and when he half jokingly chided her for her [illegible] she laughingly [illegible] her food was more to her than any man!

"Then you ought to be punished as a vandal [illegible] of beauty. You don't appreciate what the gods have given you in your figure. You deserve to lose it."

They had a fresh bottle of champagne.

Luana was thirsty from dancing. Besides, the more one drank of it, the more one forgot one's disappointments and ill luck. Her eyes sparkled like two sapphires under its influence, and her soft laugh rang out repeatedly.

This was just what "Handsome" wanted.

An hour passed. Two hours. Over the treetops the young moon rode high in a deep blue sky.

They danced again and again to the beautiful music of the orchestra, on a floor that was becoming more crowded, so that "Handsome" could hold her closer to him without its being noticed.

Nor did Luana herself seem to notice it, and the crushing of her orchids. Well, he would send her more tomorrow! He would send her more than flowers tomorrow. Something more tangible. He would send her jewelry!

* * *

"I'm mad about you, Luana," whispered "Handsome" [illegible]

She smiled dreamily. His words came faintly to her like the obligato to a song the leader of the orchestra was crooning. Everything was dreamlike, in this setting of perfume and music, and moonlight, with the floodlights playing on the fountains, and a handsome young man making eyes at her.

If it had been Jimmy Randolph . . .

Where was he now? With Miss Vandaveer, of course.

A Good Omen?

The slim finger that held the champagne glass tightened about its stem, so that suddenly it snapped.

"That's lucky, Luana. That's a good omen [illegible]" "Handsome" [illegible] a waiter hurried forward to [illegible] the two broken pieces and mop up the champagne. "[illegible] christening, you know! Or a blessing on what I just told you, you blessed, beautiful thing [illegible]!"

Had she known it, Jimmy Randolph, as tense as she was at that moment, had had a similar mishap. He had broken a glass goblet in the Florentine salon of the Vandaveer penthouse and Simes, the butler, was mopping up the spilled liquid and removing the broken pieces, just as the waiter at the inn was doing for Luana. It was a curious coincidence even to the phrase about the luck.

Was she lucky?

The waiter had brought a fresh glass and was filling it with more champagne.

She said dubiously, because of the warmth in her veins: "Now, 'Handsome,' I think I've had enough, thanks. I'm usually rather—abstemious."

"Nonsense, Luana. This is the very first time you've come out with me. It's got to be perfect." He leaned across the tiny table that divided them and gave her a long, meaning look. It made her self-conscious. She turned her head away, staring out over the grounds that were illuminated with bright lights here and there.

"It is perfect, 'Handsome.' This scene, I mean. It's like a song written in a Persian Garden."

"Omar Khayyam?"

She nodded her head. The lovely line of her throat, like a long stem holding a golden chalice, drew him so that his heart beat faster at her beauty.

He told himself that he desired her madly, that he must have her, no matter how long it took, and what subtlety he had to display.

"Omar Khayyam [illegible] a wise [illegible] Luana," he said softly. He quoted what the god of [illegible]

[illegible]

And he thought of Gerald and the consequence of her mad [illegible] that had caused her [illegible] with him much in accord with the epicurean Khayyam philosophy of pleasure first and what [illegible] it had led her [illegible]

He Would Know

"Handsome" looked amazed. "Don't [illegible] you brought a beautiful young woman out to an expensive spot like this (not that he minded the money—money was nothing to him and never had been) but in spite of your best effort she continued absolutely level-headed!"

He would have to take another tack.

Find out what interested and appealed to her most.

She was not really frivolous despite her good looks and her youth, and she had had a good education, moreover.

Some kind of a mystery about the child, was there not? If he continued to feel his way, he would have her investigated. There was a clever private detective he often employed.

Why had she chosen to be a mannequin? Where were her people? Had she any people? He was not usually curious, but now he felt immediately interested in Luana Waters of the poetic name and looks.

They had danced again. She danced beautifully. She wore clothes beautifully. She had a [illegible] figure, even if it was a bit immature.

What had her past been? Was she hiding anything? She had a deer-like look of alarm in her beautiful eyes when he said anything daring to her, and then her heavy lids would droop like a veil, and she would become secretive.

He had noticed that.

At 19 years of age most girls "Handsome" knew were free and free.

Most of them, indeed, had a good deal of the gold digger in their composition. When he took them out he expected that.

His hitherto numerous sisters and cousins had rooked him pretty free, but he hadn't minded.

What was money for if not to spend it? And gave the girls one fancied a good time strictly on the quid pro quo (something for something) principle, of course.

Luana Waters, however, was different. There was something inscrutable about her, something of the Mona Lisa in her half-[illegible]

Had she already a boy friend and was she laughing up her sleeve at him? Or maybe she was engaged to some worthy fellow and was looking forward to marriage?

On the other hand, maybe she knew on which side her bread was buttered and was not going to fall easily for him, going to make things difficult, on the assumption that a man only values what he has had to put up a stiff fight for?

The idea that she was a human iceberg was unthinkable, with her beauty of face and figure.

Champagne so far had not loosened her tongue or her emotions. He continued to get her to take more . . .

Presently she was telling him about her desire to travel, to see the world, to go everywhere.

"So the little girl's never been beyond Yonkers?" he teased her, but with [illegible]

[illegible] "I'm [illegible]" she flashed back at him, before she could check herself. "It isn't so long ago that I took a 3000-mile trip [illegible] there."

"Europe or California?" he asked quickly.

She was silent, then she [illegible] it off with a laugh.

"Handsome's" Plea

"Why can't you leave me my little mystery? When you know everything about a person they're not interesting, are they? Never you mind where I came from!" She added with an unexpected touch of coquetry: "Isn't it enough that I'm here?"

"Not nearly enough," he flashed at her. "I want some guarantee for the future, Luana."

Congress Town Suit

TO LOOK CRISP as a clump of jonquils is simple enough in the springtime . . . but to carry on into the hot summer with the same effect is a wardrobe job of no mean proportions. Soft, fine crepe with white accents is one way. Here is a Fashion Congress ensemble, a printed crepe town suit of frock and coat, that will see you into summer with utmost coolness. It is modeled by Miss Frances Cove of Winchester. Tailored, yet feminine, the fitted three-quarter coat has puffed sleeves. White organdie is done up in a colonial-gentleman shirt frill, a pretty feature of the slimly-fitted frock. Look closely and you'll see that the white scatter-print is of tiny anchors. White baku with a froth of navy veil shades the eyes in a becoming mushroom-shape bonnet. A budget ensemble.

For shopping information on this Fashion Congress selection, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Danger of Skin Irregularities

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

IT is always a good plan to keep an eye out for disturbances of the skin. Skin eruptions are often an indication of some simple digestive disturbance.

They may give warning of the onset of a contagious or infectious disease. At times the temporary relief of such a trouble is easily accomplished but often complete cure is more difficult.

Among the disturbances I have in mind is psoriasis. This is a chronic, inflammatory disease of the skin, the actual cause of which is not yet known. I am glad to say, however, that within recent years the disease has been successfully treated.

Unfortunately, there are many cases that do not respond to treatment and continue to baffle medical science.

Many persons confuse psoriasis with other chronic inflammations of the skin. For example, they often mistake it for eczema or impetigo. Let me tell you a bit more about psoriasis and point out the differences of this disease from other skin disturbances.

SIGN OF DISEASE

In psoriasis there will be seen many dry, reddish patches on the skin. These are covered by a white, grayish-white, or mother-of-pearl-colored scale. These patches vary in size from a pinhead to a silver dollar and may involve any part of the body, but are most commonly found on the elbows or knees. They differ from the rash seen in eczema in that they are dry and do not itch. In eczema the rash is moist, causing an intolerable itching.

Since the causative germ has never been discovered, other causes have been sought. Since the disease seems to occur in certain families, it may well be that heredity plays a part.

Diet and attention to the general health are advised for all sufferers from this affliction. A low protein diet is advised; this means a limitation upon all foods rich in protein, such as meat, fish, fowl, meat soups, eggs, liver and kidneys. Avoid any tendency toward constipation and make every effort to improve the general health.

REGULAR EATING

Meals should be taken at regular hours. Hasty eating is a bad habit that must be overcome and faulty digestion must be corrected. An abundance of fresh air and sunshine is recommended to build up the general tone of the skin. Avoid excessive fatigue and obtain adequate hours of sleep and relaxation.

Let me warn against the indiscriminate use of salves and ointments. Do not be misled by a well-meaning friend who advises some special salve "guaranteed" to cure psoriasis. Let your doctor prescribe the necessary medication. He will safeguard you from further irritation of the skin and its spread.

"Your Figure, Madame!"

Fruit Diet Is Easy Way To Lose Fat

By IDA JEAN KAIN

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

YOU can't expect to feel as chipper as a robin in the spring if you are dragging around 20 to 50 pounds of excess weight. Ask your doctor about it.

If he advises that you will look and feel better with less weight, get rid of the cumbersome curves. It is penny wise and pounds foolish to start reducing before you have been examined by your physician.

The best spring tonic for overweights is the Fruit Brand and Vegetable Regime, given in the leaflet "Dodging the Calories," which takes the starch out of the menu and injects it into the reducer's backbone. The Regime is a marvelous springboard to your figure program, for not only does it bring an immediate loss in weight, but it gives you control over your appetite.

Appetite seems to be the biggest stumbling block in the path of all would-be dieters. A ravenous appetite is the sign of a stretched stomach. You see, the stomach is a muscular organ, and its size is controlled by the quantity of food eaten. It expands and contracts, and with a stretched stomach the more you eat the more you want. When the stomach shrinks the craving for food is lessened.

Works a Magic

The Fruit Regime does shrink the stomach, which is a highly important preparatory step. It works a magic with weight because of the rapidity with which the foods are digested in the absence of fat, protein and starch. You may lose from three to five pounds the first week of reducing. So great a weight loss would be dangerous except during this first week when you are dealing with the soft, watery fat.

Spring is the time to take a new lease on life, and the Fruit Regime is a much better tonic than that old-fashioned concoction of sulphur and molasses. You must be prepared for hunger pangs, for any menu lacking in fat will not stick to the ribs, and a couple of hours after you have eaten you will be hungry again. This empty feeling means that you are going to lose weight! If you feel your will power slipping, bolster it with a cup of hot tea, bouillon or fruit juice. This will allay the hunger pangs without defeating your program.

Any low calorie fruit or vegetable may be included in this regime, but do not add bread, butter, milk, meat, eggs or any food other than fruits or vegetables to the menus. Take nothing for granted if you want to lose weight.

Do you know your rule about water drinking? Take all the water you want between meals. In fact, you need at least eight glasses of water daily, particularly while reducing, but restrict your mealtime liquids to eight ounces. Gulping down large quantities of liquid with the meals tends to stretch the stomach.

All wise reducers use salt sparingly, since science has found that salt holds water in the tissues, which retards registered weight loss and discourages the reducer.

The Fruit Regime may be followed for two or three days, according to your weight losses, after which the reducing menus will conform closely to your regular eating program, minus the concentrated calories.

BRIXTON FAINTS ON LEARNING OF ESCAPE

CHAPTER 632

A SHARP cry from Helena Brixton echoed her husband's despairing cry as he swooned, and as she rushed to where he lay slumped in the arms of Harry Underwood and Dicky, I saw an infinitely sorrowful look upon Lilian's face.

It had been her hand that had dealt this blow to the friend of her young girlhood, and I knew how poignant was her remorseful regret that fate had compelled her to play the role of executioner.

"Sam, Sam, dear!" she called, bending over him. Then she straightened, and looked up pitifully at the men holding him.

Dr. Braithwaite was in the room by the time she had finished speaking, and he bent over the unconscious man, scanning his face closely, lifting his eyelids and looking at the pupils.

"He'll come round in a minute or two," he said in matter of fact tones. "He isn't in any danger. Just keep him quiet."

FEAR FOR RONALD

It was little more than the minute he had named before Sam Brixton opened his eyes and looked into those of his wife bending over him.

"What's the matter, Helena?" he asked weakly.

"Nothing much, darling," she answered, taking one of his hands in hers. "You fainted for a minute, that's all. You're all right, now, aren't you?"

"Yes; I guess I'm all right," he said. "But I'm all up in the air. Did somebody say that Ronald nearly got killed last night trying to protect that box from those gangsters?"

"But he isn't hurt a bit, Sam?" she cried. "Look at him! He's smiling at you! It's only a scratch."

"I'm so glad," he said, but there was no relief in his face. "Did somebody say the box was safely in the house?"

THE GANGSTERS ARRIVE

"Yes; Lee Chow has it!" my father said, eyeing him closely.

A spasm of some emotion contorted his face, but his lips said, "That's fine." A few seconds later, he spoke again.

"Are there captured gangsters in the house?"

"Three in the cellar, and more that will be there or ready for their coffins by the time we get through with them," my father said grimly. "But you mustn't talk any more. Help him to the couch, boys. Then, Richard, will you take a look from a front window and see if you can see any sign of the state troopers' car? Stay there until you do see it, unless we call you back."

"All right, sir," Dicky said, going out of the room. It was fully five minutes before he returned.

"State troopers coming up the drive, sir," he said, just as Katie, from the kitchen, let out a shrill scream.

"Car coming down hill like mad."

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wise Parents Reward Good And Discourage Bad In Children

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Don't be small editions of Nero.

That is my advice today to fathers and mothers, especially those who believe sparing the rod is spoiling the child.

Don't strike your little son and daughter when in temper. To do so is not only brutal, but cowardly.

I have seen big, 200-pound men raining blows on boys who were no more than babies. How the little fellows escaped lifelong injury will always be beyond me.

But I have never seen a father beating his full-grown son. He knows better.

We've all seen children whose every act made our blood boil. Often we've been obliged to strangle the impulse to seize these little wrongdoers and give them the lesson of their lives.

The sensible parent knows he cannot hammer good into a boy or girl. And wisely he refrains from attempting anything so impossible.

Rather, he seeks to train his child for manhood or womanhood by REWARDING the right and PUNISHING the wrong. Brutal beating barred, he makes the punishment take the form of loss of the pleasures every boy and girl wants.

The next time your son does something that angers you, overcome your desire to strike him. Instead, say:

"Johnny, you know you shouldn't have done that. I am not going to whip you. Rather, I'm telling you now to hand back your ticket to the school dance. You are to stay at home. That's your punishment."

To Johnny missing the dance will be ten times more serious than any beating you could give him. And more, he will remember it a lot longer.

Of course, if Johnny is so stubborn that he attempts to forcibly leave the house and attend the dance in spite of you, a little physical force on your part would not only be necessary but justified.

However, the parent who starts early to reward the good and punish the bad will never be required to resort to violence. The child will have learned his lesson—and a good lesson it will be, for life is always a series of rewards for the right and punishments for the wrong.

My first letter comes from a ... ng Springfield girl, who says ...

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am to be married in June, even though neither myself nor my fiance can afford marriage. But we have been going together for four years and have waited patiently for the depression to end. At last we have resolved to take a chance and marry.

My problem is that my mother insists on a church wedding with all the usual display. Where we money will come from I do not know. In all probability we shall place a third mortgage on our home.

Miss Fairfax, don't you think we would be showing better judgment to go away to some distant city and be married? Two or three weeks later we could surprise our friends with the news.

KATHERINE.

MY DEAR KATHERINE:

Put the idea of eloping out of your head. I have told hundreds to do that. And I now tell you.

Runaway marriages are never wise. Too often they invite scandal, which no amount of explaining will ever overcome.

If you take my advice, you will buy a simple afternoon dress with matching accessories and walk to the church in your neighborhood about 4 o'clock on Sunday afternoon. There, in the presence of your family and a few close friends, you will be married.

The whole thing ought not to cost you more than 50 dollars—that is, if you leave immediately on a short honeymoon. There is always a relative or a friend in a faraway city anxious to entertain newlyweds.

The quiet, unostentatious afternoon wedding is practical and fashionable. Several of my millionaire friends are planning them. And best of all, no one will care how little or how much you spend.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Last year I met a boy whom I liked very much. He asked me to go out with him several times, but I always refused. One day he pleaded with me so long that I finally consented.

After I went out with him a few times I learned to care for him, as he was quite different from the boys that I had known. He had a good job, but his parents demand his whole pay and will not permit him to do the things he would like to do.

Last week he told me he was leaving home because he was of age and was still treated like a child. He also said that no matter what happened he would come back to me.

Miss Fairfax, do you think his parents are just in doing this to him and do you think he will ever return?

BROKEN HEARTED.

MY DEAR CHILD:

In these difficult times it is often necessary for parents to require children to turn over their entire salaries for the support of the home. I know of several families which are dependent on the wages of a boy or girl under 21.

However, I do think parents should be considerate. If a child earns money, he should be permitted to retain a portion of it to spend as he pleases. For a mother or father to demand every cent of a son's or daughter's salary is to destroy the enthusiasm of youth, which is a mighty important thing in this world.

Yes, Irene, I'm sure your friend will come back to you. Hardships don't affect true love. Rather they make it stronger and more enduring.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Fragrant Oil to Anoint the Body

POSED BY IRENE BENNETT.

Versatile Lotion Strikes A New High in Elegance For Tub or Shower

By ARLINE GOULD

YOU can sail in the wind, golf in the sun or ski in the cold and still keep your body as beautiful and alluring as though you lived an orchidaceous life in a gardener's stuffy hothouse.

How? The answer is amazingly simple, even though we must go back several thousands of years through history's pages to the Greeks—who had a word for it.

It's a luxurious, creamy lotion which you put on all over your body BEFORE you take your bath. Under its benevolent touch your skin becomes instantly soft and delightful—velvety smooth and fragrant.

If you can imagine anything more luxurious than the ancient art of anointing the body with rare and fragrant oils, then you'll have to name it. Personally, we can't.

And you have all the [illegible] hundred for which the Greeks were famous. Not only has it a haunting perfume [illegible] but it is healing and [illegible] as well. Use it for sunburn, windburn and chapped skin, and you'll be amazed and delighted with the results.

It is a perfect deodorant, as well. Used either before or after your de luxe milk bath (the De Milo variety) it will revitalize your body. A few drops of this delicate balm, rubbed into the skin, will retain its elusive scent for hours to come.

It comes in a hand-some milk-white bottle reminiscent of cosy Parisian apothecaries. In its modern, Parisian revival, it is one of the most versatile beauty aids we have yet come across, as its use is not restricted to the skin of the body. It also makes an ideal lubricant for the face.

However, it is really as a luxurious body revitalizer that it comes into its own. So, if you have been looking all your life for a cream lotion to use on your body in the same way and for the same reason you use lubricating creams on your face, your search is at an end.

If you care to learn the name of this delicate balm that retains its haunting perfume long after you have emerged from the bath, call Arline Gould, Liberty 9000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Making the Declarer Guess

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Aggressive, rather than passive action, can save many an almost hopeless situation.

The ability to size up a problem from both one's own and the declarer's viewpoint is an indispensable qualification for expert defense.

In today's hand, West saw just one hope to defeat a vulnerable game contract, and he promptly acted on it to excellent effect.

South dealer
North South vulnerable.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♢	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass (1)	Pass

(1) Since South, after North's very strong bid, could not make an Asking Bid, North is not justified in going further.

West opened the King of diamonds and followed with the Ace, after which he switched to a club. South won with the Ace, took out the adverse trumps, stripped the clubs and then led a heart from his own hand up to dummy.

West, meanwhile, had been doing some thinking. His Q 10 of hearts lying under dummy's A J 9 did not look propitious, but he knew that his partner must have one of the missing honors, and that was only one hope to feel sure of defeating the contract. That was to lead a heart and hope that declarer would misguess the position of the Queen.

So on the first heart lead, he boldly put up the Queen! Dummy's Ace won; declarer returned to his hand with a trump and led a second heart up to the remaining J 9.

West played the six and declarer had a tough guess. Naturally he was suspicious, but he knew that West would have played just the same with K Q 6 and the two diamond overcall made by West persuaded him to believe that both high honors were in West's hand.

So he went up with dummy's Jack—and lost the game!

Had West made the usual passive play of a low heart on the first lead of that suit, declarer would undoubtedly have played the nine, forcing East's King, for the loss of only one heart trick.

Broilers, Ducklings Favorites Now

From Martha Lee's Friday morning broadcast over Station WNAC

Native broilers and ducklings rank high among the fine foods that come with the spring. They are on the market counters now.

Broilers are, so to speak, the tender cuts of chicken. They are the young birds only four weeks to two months old. Their muscles are small, delicate and tender. There is no accumulation of fat, so that fat is usually added in cooking.

Because the meat is so tender, broilers can be cooked quickly and because the connective tissue is so thin, it is not appreciably toughened even when submitted to rather high cooking temperatures as it is in broiling. The flavor is so delicate that the only seasoning needed is a little salt and pepper, with melted butter. Accompaniments for broiled chicken should be the milder-flavored vegetables and salads.

CHICKEN SPLIT

For broiling, the chicken is split into halves, lengthwise. The backbone may or may not be removed. Serving and eating are somewhat simplified if it is taken out before cooking. The pieces are rubbed with fat and they may be salted lightly before cooking. Then, for oven broiling, the pieces are laid skin side up on the broiler rack and placed under a hot flame to brown. This requires from five to seven minutes. Then the pieces are turned, without, however, puncturing the meat, lest the juices run out.

When the cut side has browned, the flame is turned low and the meat is cooked for about 10 to 15 minutes more, depending on the size and thickness of the pieces. The high initial heat seals in the meat, and the lower heat finishes the cooking without drying it out or toughening it.

Browning the skin side first and then finishing the cooking with the cut side up catches the juices in the tiny hollows and allows the meat to absorb them instead of letting them drip into the broiler pan. It also keeps the skin tender and soft. Just before serving, the pieces are brushed with melted butter.

PAN BROILING

Pan broiling is similar to oven broiling. The pieces of chicken, brushed with fat, are put into a hot skillet which has also been brushed with fat. After the pieces have been browned, the flame is turned down so that the actual cooking is not too fast, lest the outside scorch before the inside of the muscles is entirely cooked.

Duck or duckling, as the young duck is called, come from nearby farms and are weighing from 5 to 6½ pounds. The meat of duck is darker in color than that of any other domestic bird. It is deliciously flavorsome, and for the diet which requires careful restriction of fat, it is a fine meat. The proportion of meat to bone is somewhat low, and therefore duck is often considered something of a delicacy. The common method of cooking is roasting with or without stuffing. It may also be fried.

FRIED DUCK

A medium-sized duck will cut into six good sized portions for frying. Put the pieces skin-side down in a hot skillet, letting the fat fry out quickly. Enough fat will fry out to brown the cut sides. Pour off any surplus fat. When well browned, roll each piece in flour and brown again. Season with salt and pepper, and cover the pan closely. Cook slowly for 30-35 minutes. When the meat is done, uncover and let cook for about five minutes to brown the meat thoroughly again. Remove the duck from pan, thicken drippings with flour, allowing two tablespoons flour for each cup of milk to be added. Add two tablespoons minced parsley.

SERVANT PROBLEM

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it right or wrong for a nursemaid to entertain while my husband and I are out? One day, upon returning home, I found my maid in the living-room entertaining her boy friend and brother. I give her every Thursday off and every other Saturday and Sunday.

READER.

It is thoroughly out of order for your nursemaid to entertain her friends in your living-room, and you must make her definitely understand this. You are generous in the amount of time off you give her and she shouldn't take advantage of your generosity by doing things that are inappropriate for her to do.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

ANN MEETS NO. 1 'FUNNY MAN'

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

It is rather an ironic commentary on the lack of will power of the great majority that we seem unable to put into effect the undoubted advantages of daylight saving without putting all our clocks ahead an hour, reprinting all the railroad time-tables, and otherwise depending on mechanisms

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Let me hasten to remark that I'm all for daylight saving. Why shouldn't I be? I have no cows to milk, no vegetables to pick all dew-bestrewn in the early dawning hours.

I have no child of an age to waken me an hour earlier out of habit or to rebel against going byelow while it is still light and hot

It is true that Wendy the dog does get all hot and bothered for a week or ten days because her six p. m. feeding, theoretically her only meal of the day, runs unaccountably an hour earlier and she talks a good deal about it. But she soon gets into the swing of things and seems perfectly satisfied.

Daylight Saving Comfort, Joy Forever

Theoretically, I say, I can understand the arguments against daylight saving given by mothers of small children, dairy farmers, railroad officials, and market gardeners, who, for all I know, are a majority in the state.

Practically, their arguments mean nothing to me. To me daylight saving is a thing of comfort and a joy forever. At least until the last Sunday in September, when the dog to her undisguised astonishment begins to get her supper an hour later. I enjoy every late afternoon and twilight of those five long months.

I haven't even the excuse that I mess about with a garden in the summer months, or play golf, or tennis. My own pleasures and recreations can be carried on just as well by electric light. But one—I, at least—gets a bit weary of the long, long winter evenings and is glad of the change to the long, long summer afternoons.

True, I do not often travel by train in the summer months. It takes me most of the summer to get onto the ropes once more and work out in my head the logic of the railroad timetables and the cock-eyed clocks in the railroad stations.

But by the latter part of September I have it all down cold—just as we revert to normal time, sun time—or what my dear old Great Uncle George who lived in the country and was against all these newfangled deviltries used to call "God's time."

But—think of the abject confession of failure of will involved in the whole complicated business. Obviously the plain, simple, logical thing to do is for everybody to get up an hour earlier and start his day's activities an hour earlier without messing about the clocks.

All it needs is an effort of will and imagination.

The fact that such a procedure has not yet appeared feasible means, first, that railroad schedules must be the key to the whole business, and, second, that we are such creatures of habit that we can actually rise and get to work an hour earlier only provided that it seems the same hour that we are accustomed to.

Haunted by Imaginary Lost Hour of Sleep

The other notion apparently is not feasible. We should be haunted all day long by that imaginary lost hour of sleep and the fact that we caught up with it at the end of day would mean nothing to us. In fact, we are really no more wise, and no more masters of our will, than the babies for whom "time" changes not, or the beasts of the field whose milk-producing processes recognize no clocks, nor the dews on the grass.

We have to make allowances for them. We have to make allowances for ourselves. Apparently we have to make allowances for railroad officials, those inflexible automata. Poor fellows! Probably they have trouble enough with the traditionally stupid public without complicating it still further.

For obviously my little scheme which seems so simple and useful really makes the whole matter worse instead of better. Time is not mocked. We only agree or conspire to mock ourselves.

But the result, I still insist, is extraordinarily pleasant and convenient for those of us who are able to manipulate time to suit ourselves. Anyway, the administration is doing enough for the farmers without our inconveniencing ourselves on their account.

Why not pay them for the hour they miss?

'Read Pink Final' Comedian Pleads With Ann For 'Sure Thing' on Races She Tells Him

Jack Benny Descends On Hub

TREASURES HIS "GAGS"

By ANN MARSTERS

When Jack Benny was a little boy (a very little boy), he didn't want to be a policeman or a fireman or a G-Man. He wanted to be a great violinist.

[illegible]

"How does it feel, Mr. Benny, to be America's foremost radio comedian?"

[illegible]

"It's quite a strain; quite a responsibility and I'd much rather be second or third or even fourth in the voting."

"Funny" Hard Job

[illegible] Jack Benny is finding the job of being a "funny" man an awful lot of hard work.

[illegible] at the age of six, Jack Benny began to practice the violin.

"By the time I was 17," he said, "I thought I was immense—on the violin—so I got a job in a theater orchestra in my home town. It's Waukegan, Illinois, if anybody would like to know.

"But the theater closed down, and then I went into a vaudeville musical act."

[illegible]

Values "Gags"

[illegible]

"I save them for my broadcast," says he, "and besides, I can't always carry my script writer around with me to whisper things in my ear.

"As for Mary—she's pretty serious, too—and her only absorbing interest (outside of me and her work) is clothes. Mary loves clothes and she dresses very well—if I'm not prejudiced."

"Incidentally, Mr. Benny, do you think you're very funny on the air?" (This is always a good question to ask a comedian.)

"No," said Mr. Benny.

"Do you think you're funnier than Fred Allen?"

"No," said Mr. Benny.

"What DO you think, Mr. Benny?"

"Night Pink Swell!"

"I think," said Mr. Benny, "that playing the horses is a lot of fun."

[illegible] NIGHT PINK FINAL [illegible]

"I think it's swell," he said, for lack of a better word. "This is just the time of year when people begin to get really steamed up about baseball and racing and things like that. I know I am—but maybe I'm no thermometer."

"And by the way," he said, having noticed something about handicapping in his perusing of the paper, "how about a nice fool-proof tip on the ponies?"

[illegible]

"There's no such thing."

Bags 20-Lb. Lobster, But Nary a Pan

It was a great prize that [illegible] Fagin of Wadsworth street, East Boston, brought home today after the trawler Wave docked. It was a 20-pound lobster with a two-foot stem-to-stern measurement and a two-foot spread of claws.

The only trouble was that Mrs. Fagin and the four Fagin children couldn't find a pan in the house big enough to hold the oversize crustacean and so they worried all day [illegible] to have lobster for supper.

Fagin, member of the Wave's crew, claimed the prize when he was helping haul in the nets off Cape Cod where the Wave was after redfish.

Woman Becomes Budhist Priest

Tacoma, Wash., April 24 (AP)—Mrs. Sunya Pratt, America's first white woman to become a Buddhist priest, looked ahead today to the next step in the priesthood—renouncing her family and becoming a "begging nun."

For the present she plans only to teach Buddhist philosophy here but "some day I hope to go to Japan."

Before her ordination last night, Mrs. Pratt had lived the ordinary life of an English-born woman, wife of a salesman and former proprietor of a small flower shop. She is the mother of two children.

"After my children are grown and able to take care of themselves," she said, "perhaps I will take the next step in the priesthood. Becoming a true 'begging nun,' renouncing my family, home, all possessions, except a robe, a bowl and a rosary."

Her husband and children, who also adhere to the Buddhist religion, were present to see her ordained. Some of her pupils will be American-born Japanese children who "cannot quite understand the formal Japanese language of the priests."

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBride

Striped barber shop poles and the pawnbroker's golden three-ball sign, the gilded watch outside the jeweler's and the stuffed raccoon in front of a furrier's place linger on in Boston. The town remains traditionally conservative.

MARJORIE McBRIDE

One learns with disappointment, however, that such ancient symbols of the trades are [illegible] disappearing, even here. In most [illegible]

A casual inquiry failed to bring to light a single surviving cigar store Indian in Boston. Of course, there must be one or two. In front of the W. W. Winship luggage store in Boylston street hangs a trunk [illegible] since 1898. Pascarelli Brothers in Federal street, who do things to shoes, retain the sign they started with, a regular sixteen gilded boot. Bob Smith's Sporting Goods Store in Federal street keeps a "gold" gun in front of the place. It has been there for thirty years. Jewelers hang onto the gilded watches significant of their craft. Fur bearing animals, mounted, are not as common as they used to be. But they exist.

A fascinating history surrounds these passing trade symbols. The three-ball sign of the pawnbrokers is said to have been taken from the crest of the Medicis, medieval Italian potentates, and patrons of goldsmiths and money lenders. Striped barber poles were adopted in a misty past in which barbers were blood letters and auxiliary physicians as well as hair cutters and masters of the permanent wave.

The watches outside watch dealers' and jewelers' establishments usually give the time as 8 19 o'clock. That, in itself, is a long story!

Cape Cod to Have Polo This Summer

Polo will come to Cape Cod in an important way this summer. Fred (Oklahoma) Tejan, a professional, once associated with the late Will Rogers, will introduce it. He promoted the Flamingo matches in Miami last winter. In those matches, by the way, Gibson J. Foley, formerly of Brookline, was one of the shining stars. He learned the game while attending University of Virginia.

Some one of these days the good citizens of Portland, Me., are going to erect a monument to Charles E. Clarke, a baker in Bramhall square. Or maybe not. Depending on how they feel about pigeons.

Until he opened his bakery five years ago, Portland was notably free of pigeons. He started leaving stale cakes out in front of his shop for birds. News travels fast in the bird world and it was practically no time at all before the pigeons were arriving in droves, giving the flying wedge to sparrows and robins, and taking command.

Now the town looks like Boston Common during a pigeons' convention.

Biggest Umpire Retains His Youth

He's 6 feet 4, according to the statisticians, and "Cal" Hubbard, new umpire in the American League, packs the brawn that goes with that height. Catching him in a lounge in Hotel [illegible] the other day, a fan remarked:

"Cal, you look as fresh and young as you ever were!"

"Brothah," drawled Cal, "Ah don't do nuthin' to make me look othahwise."

Which is true. Baseball historians say he neither drinks nor smokes.

Having settled with the wondering fan, he relaxed into an easy chair and got busy with his favorite crossword puzzle.

Dr. Joseph Lelyveld of Rockland, in charge of podiatrists during the recent Marathon, has things to say that should be of interest to hikers as well as runners. Particularly interesting to prospective entrants in future Marathons.

At the end of a long race, he advises, elevate the feet for 20 minutes to equalize circulation. A runner's shoes, he finds, should be medium weight, with kid uppers, flexible soles and rubber heels. They should lace below the ankle. Inner socks should be of cotton. If runners insist on woolen socks, they should be worn outside. He thinks spraying the feet with an antiseptic, after a hike, is beneficial.

'HEX' BLAMED FOR RED SOX DEFEAT

HITLESS BATS CALLED MINOR CAUSE OF PHILLY DOWNFALL

AUSTEN LAKE

Red Sox Capers:

Meditation on the Clowns of Spring

Philadelphia, Pa., April 24.

IT WAS SPRINGTIME in Connie Mack's empty acres. Not the wintry back draft that passes for New England's seasonal wakening. But spring, with the breath of orchids, soft as an infant's kiss and a vernal opiate which clouds the senses. Spring crept up from the grass roots at Shibe Park into the Red Sox veins and made them giddy and ridiculous as though soused on nature's whiskey.

Austen Lake

I mean that a syrupy warmth poured out of a cloudless sky so that smoke spirals from distant factories were motionless plumes, like the smudges of a printer's thumb, and the roofs of Philadelphia's herringbone houses, beyond the outfield walls, were hung with the week's wash, limp in breathless air.

Spring mounted to the Red Sox brains. It stole into Wes Ferrell's elbow and loaded his arm with lead, so that, until Joe Cronin, as boss poet, hauled him in, he seemed less like a paramount pitching artist than a cracker barrel yokel fresh from a silo circuit.

Yet, considering the love light in his eyes, it is possible that Cornelius' kids did not recognize the person they were thwacking so hilariously as The Ferrell, the league's Magna Cum Laude man.

News travels slowly in Philadelphia and the freshmen whom Connie had plucked from the weeds, may not read the papers. Wes should have shown them his clippings.

As it was they just grabbed their handles and swung on the fast ball which came up like apple dumplings, until Henry came in from the bull pen and turned out to be the man that Ferrell should have been.

* * *

RHYMES AND A ROUT

WELL, SIR! the lazy day was so compelling Pinky Higgins was on second and Wally Moses on first in the third inning when Jimmie Foxx began making up some April rhymes and rummaging around for a word to go with "Zephyr." The best he would do was "Heifer," when Wally wandered off his base. Rick Ferrell fired the ball to Jimmy, who was shocked plumb out of his iambic pentameter, so that he whirled around on his blind side and threw to the wrong base.

Then Rabbit Warstler slammed one out to Almada who was looking for four-leaf-clovers. And Mel blinged it toward third base with a negligent heave, so that the ball trickled past Melillo, McNair and Werber, each of whom waved yoo-hoos as it went by and looked generally like WPA workers with nothing to do and plenty of leisure to do it. So the ball holed up in the Athletic's dugout and two runs scored

But the most inspired novelty happened in the fourth, when McNair picked up Hayes' grounder and aimed it at one of Connies' pet pigeons on the mezzanine girders behind first base. Not wishing to seem ungrateful Hayes took second.

This annoyed Wes Ferrell, who felt as host of the party, all such innovations should be left to him. So, when Kelley tapped a robust bunt to the box, Wes wheeled around toward third, where Hayes was loafing up gently, ready to give himself up without a struggle. Wes wouldn't hear to such sacrifice. He'd show this McNair something original in novelty throwing. So he hit Umpire Red Ormsby, who was standing back of the base and off to one side, flush on the foot.

* * *

HITS AND ERRORS

This, of course, evoked the wildest admiration from the dugout, but considerable jealousy on the part of Billy Werber, who stood nibbling his nails and thinking of something daffier to do. So after Hayes had scored and the applause died down, Rabbit Warstler came up again and knocked a slow roller toward short-stop.

Quick to see the possibilities, Billy hustled over, timing the play nicely so that just as McNair had his hands basketed for the ball, Werber hit him a gosh a mighty lick with his shoulder. So that the ball skidded away and the two boys gouged up divots with their chins while the base runners galloped for dear life.

Well the customers, who were just enough to make a coroner's jury, thought this was nothing short of genius and rolled in the aisles among the peanut shucks. They who had come to hoot, remained to holler.

The order of clowns and wisemen had been reversed.

Thus spring came into the lives of the Red Sox, who reached a zenith of nonsense seldom surpassed by Bob Quinn's raggedly Athletes in his poor house day. They lost the ball game, 9 to 1, the one being a horrendous wallop by Jimmy Foxx that knocked the tar off the left field bleacher roof.

"Would enjoy extremely being present at Night Pink Final dinner along with Jimmy Foxx, Al Schacht, Wes Ferrell and Lefty Grove."

JUST STARTING

These great stars of the Red Sox are but the first group of celebrities from various branches of life who will be gathered at Benny Ginsburg's Mayfair on the evening of May 4 to honor this latest and most successful edition of the Boston Evening American, which is destined to make history.

CRONIN AND CREW BOOST "PINK" FINAL

CRONIN Acts as COACH

MARCUM HURLS 2ND GAME

By Joe Cashman

Philadelphia, April 24—The answer to the drubbing the million-dollar Red Sox suffered at the hands of the dime-a-dozen Athletics in the opener of the current two-game series, seems simple enough.

Our heroes couldn't hit. Neither could they field.

But to superstitious folks there's a lot more to it than that.

They'll tell you that the anaemic attack and dizzy defense were only secondary causes of the debacle.

In their opinion, the real reason was that Manager Joe Cronin committed the cardinal baseball sin of breaking a winning combination.

No Joe didn't make any changes in the personnel which had been galloping high, wide and handsome over all opposition

For the first time since breaking his thumb the week before, the Sox pilot donned a uniform and nominated himself first base coach vice Herb Pennock.

Now, frankly, it seems very far-fetched to blame a 9 to 1 setback on such a venial violation of an unwritten baseball law.

Still the superstitious folks can't be contradicted when they say the Fenway flock gave its most wretched performance of the season on the afternoon the change was made.

JOE SCOFFS

It's apparent, however, that Cronin puts no stock in this "hex" talk. Despite the one-sided setback his charges suffered he's going right back on the lines in the final game this p. m. What's more, he's sticking to his decision to experiment with Johnny Marcum on the hill.

"Marcum must start some time and it may as well be today," stated the boy-boss. "I'll admit I'm taking a gamble. It's the only way I can find out if the recent tonsil operation removed the stiffness and soreness from Johnny's elbow. I'm confident that if he isn't right today, he will be after another start or two."

Connie Mack's choice to oppose his old ace, "Footsie," is one of the boys he got from us in exchange, Gordon "Dusty" Rhodes by name

"Dusty" hurled one of the finest games of his career last Sunday, holding the Sox to five hits only to los to Wes Ferrell, 2 to 1

It was a different Ferrell and a different Boston supporting cast that returned to Shibe Park on Thursday

WES WILD

Wes didn't have his control and was hammered hard until he was relieved after four innings

His mates added greatly to his troubles by playing loose, dumb ball to say nothing of them being held to three hits by Harry Kelley, a 20-year-old draftee from Atlanta.

If it hadn't been for Jimmy Foxx's third homer of the season the Sox would have been whitewashed by the A's, who looked real formidable back of good flinging

The home boys found Ferrell for eight hits, four walks and all their nine runs, six of which were due to errors or bad judgment on the part of the Croninmen.

Ferrell himself made one costly wild throw Almada made another

Bees vs. Il. C.

Worcester, April 24—The postponed game between the Boston Bees and Holy Cross, scheduled for April 13, is to be played here June 1 it was announced today.

The game will be played in the early afternoon as the Bees are due in Pittsburgh for a series the following day.

Bees on Improve; Last Clash Today

"Old Faithful" Grimes Sees Them Winging

By Bill Grimes

Although they wound up finishing on the short end, it is my personal opinion—and I've seen them in every game since the start of the season—that the Bees looked more like a big league club yesterday behind the pitching of Bobby Brown than they have since the barrier was sprung.

In neither of the two games they have won did the Bees look as formidable as against the Phillies yesterday afternoon.

One pitch in Leo Norris' groove with a man on in the third and Bill Urbanski's boot in the eighth, after two men had been retired, accounted for the three runs the Phillies scored on Bobby Brown

After watching him pitch to the batters in Brooklyn and seeing his work against the Phillies yesterday for eight innings, I'm firmly convinced that Bobby Brown's arm ailment is purely mental.

Bobby was plenty fast and showed the Phillies a fine curve He struck out Chiozza, Watkins, Hashin and Wilson and Gomes twice and only issued two walks.

GOOD CONTROL

Bobby Brown had not been in the line-up because of his wildness but yesterday he displayed better control than has any Bees' pitcher this season. On about three occasions, Bobby lost control and this was due to the fact that he dragged his right foot off the rubber instead of driving off that leg, and then squaring away fast

Just so long as he is able to deliver as he did yesterday, Bobby Brown is a fixture with the Bees.

From a Bee viewpoint, Joe Cocarart divided the laurels with Bobby. Joe was making his initial start of the season at third base, replacing "Pinky" Whitney and he surely lived up with Manager Bill McKechnie's expectations

Cocarart handled five chances faultlessly. And, tw oof them were spectacular.

Yesterday was the first time Cocarart has faced any worth-while pitching this season, his hitting has been confined to the rookies' batting practice sessions.

Joe did not look so good on his first three trips to the bat but on his fourth occasion with a man on first and third, he doubled to right and put the Bees back in the ball game and caused Jimmy Wilson to derrick "Bucky" Walters for Sylvester Johnson.

Manager Bill McKechnie will pitch either Danny McFayden or Ray Benge this afternoon, which will be the final appearance of the Bees at the National League Field until May 9.

Curt Davis will probably be Jimmy Wilson's selection for mound duty.

G. B. I. MEET LURES 393

Looks For Win Or Two Today

BOB PLAYFAIR, Harvard star middle distance man, is expected to garner several points for his team in the greater Boston Intercollegiates which start at the Stadium today.

FAVOR Harvard TO WIN

TRACK CROWNS AT STAKE

Boston's Olympic Year outdoor track and field opens this afternoon at 3 o'clock with the seventh annual Greater Boston Intercollegiate championships in the Harvard Stadium.

Trials in all events and the finals of the freshman field events will open the two-day competition, in which Harvard is favored to capture its sixth G. B. I. crown from 393 varsity and freshman athletes.

Boston College, Northeastern, Boston University, Tufts, Rhode Island State and Holy Cross have entered teams. The final will be held tomorrow at 2:30 o'clock.

Little is known of the comparative strength of the respective freshman teams. But judging on the results of the past six meets and by sheer weight of number the Harvard yearlings are expected to attach their seventh straight freshman title.

Harvard tops both divisions in number of entries with 62 varsity athletes and 53 freshmen. In the varsity, Rhode Island State has entered 49; Tech 3[illegible]; Holy Cross 32; Northeastern 26 and Boston College 21. In the freshman meet M. I. T. has entered 29 athletes, Northeastern 27 and Boston College 22.

BERLIN HOPES

The presence of Rhode Island State, with its potential Olympic champions, Bill Rowe and Irving Folswarthny, in the hammer throw, and of Holy Cross with its crack sprinters and middle distance men, is expected to furnish Harvard with the strongest competition it has met.

The Crimson will be lacking the services of Milton Green, its captain and crack hurdler and three other ranking timbertoppers who are to compete in the Penn Relays.

Yet despite the absence of Green, a double winner a year ago, Harvard's tremendous balance is expected to carry the Crimson through by the smallest margin in six years.

Eight of the 1935 champions will risk their crowns in the two-day competition.

They include Norman Cahners, Emil Dubiel, Robert S. Playfair, Al Konich, Richard Jones and Malcolm Millard.

Cahners' task is an especially difficult one. In the hammer he meets Folswarthny and Rowe of R. I. State, both of whom are capable of better than 170 feet, while in the sprints he must defeat Kretzmeyer of Harvard, Scanlon of Holy Cross and Kenney of B. C.

O'Connor of Harvard, Graham of H. C. and Gill of B. C. race in the 400 meters while the 800 meters will match McKee of B. C., Dorman and Bliss of Harvard and Murphy of H. C.

Bob Woodward and Bobby Playfair of Harvard are the favorites respectively in the 1500 and 3000 meters and Alex Brown of R. I. State threatening Playfair's reign.

NORMIE CAHNERS, Crimson weight man, is down to battle to retain his double titles in the G. B. I. weight events in Cambridge. Harvard is favored to win by a close margin.

FEDERAL Court Supports SHIKAT

Columbus, O., April 24 (AP)—Counsel for Dick Shikat, German claimant of the world's heavyweight wrestling crown, contested successfully in Federal court today an attempt to prevent him from wrestling in Detroit tonight.

Attorney Fred Rector, representing Joe Alvarez, Boston matchmaker, in a managerial dispute with Shikat and Al Haft, Columbus promoter, sought to obtain a temporary restraining order to keep the wrestler from showing at Detroit.

John Connor, attorney for Shikat and Haft, told the court that they would be unable to prepare their answer to the motion until tomorrow.

Federal Judge Mell G. Underwood said he would reserve decision until the answer was filed, permitting Shikat to fill the Detroit engagement.

Temporary order preventing Shikat from wrestling was dissolved at the opening of the Federal court hearing yesterday, during which charges were aired that a wrestling "trust" exists in the eastern half of America.

Rector presented an amended application today.

Alvarez is attempting to show that a managerial contract signed with him by Shikat is binding. He asks an accounting of the wrestler's earnings since Shikat went under Haft's management.

Bob Frend Now At Rockingham

Salem, N. H., April 24—Bob Frend, starter at Rockingham, is on the scene here preparing for the Spring Meeting of the New Hampshire Jockey Club, May 25 to June 13.

Frend is rated among the leaders in his line and his work at Rockingham and Agawam last season proved popular with New England racegoers.

Frend served his apprenticeship under Jim Milton, present Suffolk Downs steward and considered one of the better starters in the country. He served 16 years under Milton and Tex Dean.

His first job as chief of the barrier group came in 1926 at the bull ring tracks of Maryland and Pennsylvania.

McAvoy Bows to Peterson

London, April 24—Jack Peterson successfully defended his British Empire heavyweight championship when he outpointed Jock McAvoy, the thumb-biting British Empire light heavyweight and middleweight titlist, in 15 fast rounds in Wembley Stadium.

Peterson's weight and reach proved too much for the game McAvoy. McAvoy, at 175 pounds, spotted Peterson twelve pounds.

There was only one knockdown. Toward the end Peterson cupped McAvoy with a right uppercut and floored him for a count of eight.

Peterson was warned several times by the referee when his blows landed on the back of McAvoy's head.

McAvoy, making good use of a few tricks he learned while fighting in the United States, weaved continually and fought from a crouch that had Peterson puzzled.

After a promising start the bout slowed up to a walk and the referee had to warn them to make a fight of it before McAvoy came out of his shell for a brief flurry.

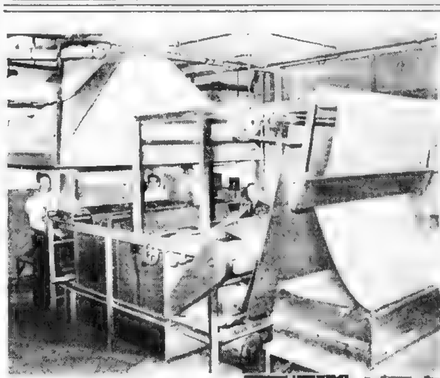
They Shall Not Shrink

Here's Why the Howard Suit You Buy Will Not Shrink



• This is The Wetting-Out Machine

We believe that no clothing organization in the world has gone further in the development of methods and machinery for the perfection of fabric shrinkage.

■ Here we show but two of the giant scientifically constructed machines used in the shrinking process of fabrics that enter into the making of Howard Clothes.

After the fabric has been examined and O.K.'d as perfect, it is permitted to enter our shrinking department. In the vats shown above, the fabric passes through steam, hot water and cold water in succession. Then 70% of the moisture absorbed in the wetting-out process is removed. As the fabric leaves the machine it folds automatically and is packed in wet blankets for 24 hours. The automatic drying rack is the next step. Here the fabric travels the full length of the 100-foot rack, unfolding and rolling slowly for one hour. Hot air currents are scientifically directed against the fabric to insure perfect and even drying.

And here's the final operation. In the finishing machine the fabric passes over a large drum perforated to permit steam to trickle through, removing all wrinkles. The fabric is now thoroughly shrunk, set and finished, ready for the cutting table.

JACOBY Enters Cup RACES

HEARST EVENT ON MAY 10

New York, April 24 (US)—Ask Fred Jacoby, Jr., the national high point champion whether he believes he will win the Albany-New York motor boat race on May 10 and he will respond with one of those snickers popularly supposed to have originated in the Bronx.

"Brother," answered the 1935 victor today when the question was put to him, "anybody who starts that race can come in first. A fellow might be five miles ahead of you and then—plop—he hits something on the Hudson or has engine trouble and he winds up somewhere south of Poughkeepsie."

With most of the speedy drivers in the country except Jacoby's 1936 entry ready to be tested for the W. Lou Paddock Hearst gold trophy and other prizes we feel we have a race of real import in store [illegible] the most difficult [illegible] world.

"As I see [illegible]
"There are at least six [illegible] You need a good boat, a good driver, fine equipment, [illegible] do a lot of hard work in preparation for the run, and sixth and last, or sixth and first as you will, you must have luck.

"I mean luck with a capital L on the 135-mile jog down the fickle Hudson. I was going like a million dollars on [illegible] and then when I reached the George Washington bridge a piston burned out. That was the only one I did not finish."

We asked Fred if physical condition meant much in this hilltop steeplechase.

"Very much, sir," he came back. "Say, my friend, Lew Frances has a good description for that Albany-New York affair.

"Lew compares it to kneeling on a cellar door which is hitched to the back of an auto traveling fifty miles an hour on a bumpy road for about 135 miles. We all must have lifejackets you know. Last year, Leon Rogers went over and was in the water for an hour before some farmers on the shore spied him and pulled him out."

Jacoby, who is 36 years old, is of all things, a scenery painter by trade. He did work for one of Cecil B. [illegible]'s later [illegible]

FISHING FOR SOME FISHING FACTS

BATTLING 'B' BACKSTOP LAUGHS AT LOSSES

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

AL LOPEZ GOV. LOUIS J. BRANN

IT'S ALWAYS FAIR WEATHER when good anglers get together, and here are Governor Brann of Maine and Catcher Lopez of the Bees forgetting their respective cares and talking over fishing experiences. Al thinks a lot of the fishing near his home town, Tampa, Fla. Governor Brann convinced him Maine angling is worth trying.

LOPEZ Is Real FIGHTER

Believes Club Will Climb

By Will Connell

It takes a fighter with a heart as big as several grapefruit to play better baseball day by day when his team is losing decisions as fast as a talkative husband.

Al Lopez, Catcher Bee of the luckless swarm, is such a performer. He's not only turning in a superior stunting effort with every start, but his confidence in the club is growing.

"The Bees are a pretty good ball club," he commented today. "Though weak hitting has cost us several decisions in the past few games. Don't forget that bad weather we met from St. Petersburg all the way North. It put the batters at least two weeks back of normal form, with a couple of exceptions. We'll get rolling soon."

Al says he feels better than ever before in his six years as a major leaguer.

"This is the first spring I haven't had a single cold, or muscle soreness because of damp weather," he continued. "Over in Brooklyn, the moist air off the Gowanus Canal nearly flattened me, each season. Boston weather has been cold, but it agrees with me much better than the Brooklyn brand."

BATS .300

Al's batting has not been up to his usual high standard but that is explained in part by the layoff during the storms en route North. And he admits he never has been a good hitter during the early stretch. His lifetime big league average is close to .700, which indicates he bats above .300 in the latter weeks of the season to balance up for the poor start.

A dynamic diamond figure, Al has as much energy afield as his double, Mickey Cochrane. The resemblance is marked, for the shape of their faces is almost identical. Only Mickey's eyebrows appear much bushier and his boxing-cauliflower ears are more prominent than Al's.

Lopez is one of the best ever going after foul flies and few batters can make first on bunts, for Al is hustling fast and sure as taxes gong after the ball. Few catchers of modern baseball have approached his skill in picking careless runners off base. Since he threw out a few recently, opponents figure they're reckless in taking more than a yard lead off any sack.

The Bees can expect a tremendous amount of work from Lopez. He is good for every game of the season, excepting injury dependent. Since he is only 27 years old, Al should be good for at least seven more seasons of top flight work.

LIKES FISHING

Off season, Al is a demon angler, fresh water and salt, near his home in Tampa, Florida. He was just beginning to think he'd have to wait until fall to get in some fishing, when Gov. Louis J. Brann of Maine dropped in for the Thursday game at the Hive. He sat in a box back of the Bees' dugout and chatted with Al for a few minutes before the game.

Gov. Brann is a Grade A angler and he even got down to talking Lopez about the gigantic Maine fish. George Stobie, genial commissioner of fish and game in Maine, backed up Gov. Brann's stories adn the conversation concluded with His Excellency inviting Lopez to come up and see for himself.

So one of these days, when the Bees have an off day, Angler Lopez will be off to the Pine Tree State, to prove he can catch more than baseball, and make a personal checkup on the size of the fabled Maine fish.

West Is Favored At Penn Relays

Philadelphia, April 24 (US)—On a basis of absolute social equality, minnows and tarpon of track athletics will mingle today and tomorrow in the 42nd annual Pennsylvania relay carnival.

Jesse Owens, Gene Venzke, Eulace Peacock and Eddie O'Brien are included among the big fish who will subordinate themselves to the major relay issues to be fought out on the refurbished Franklin Field cinderpath.

Texas, Ohio State, Michigan and Michigan State, leading powers from the Southwest and Mid-West, arrived in Philadelphia today to flaunt their style challenge at the East.

Three [illegible] Manhattan Conference and New York University compose the limited group among 500 schools and colleges which are deemed capable of scoring one or more victories in major relays, of which nine, for varsity teams are termed "championships of America."

An invitation 100-meter dash on Saturday will bring together the Negro rivals, Peacock of Temple and Owens of Ohio State.

They will be compelled to qualify in two semi-final heats, one of which will offer the opposition of Harvey (Chink) Wallender, a Texas record-maker, and barring a tremendous upheaval they will come together in a final race in which Peacock will go after his fifth straight victory over his Buckeye foe.

Columbia, Maryland and Michigan State will defend so-called championships in the major varsity relays. Columbia is not even conceded an outside chance against the sprinters from Texas in defending the title and honors.

The Longhorns, anchored by Wallender, are heavy favorites for a double, capped by an 880-yard victory Saturday. Both these events were won by Columbia a year ago, but Cornell is now considered the eastern favorite.

4 BALL Tourney PLANNED

WOLLASTON CLUB SPONSOR

For years, the more up and coming members of the Wollaston Golf Club have been endeavoring to promote a three-day four-ball best ball invitation tournament similiar to those held annually elsewhere.

After much persuasion, the tournament committee at Wollaston agreed to stage such an event on May 8, 9 and 10.

The Wollaston three day invitation should prove to be one of the choice events of the season. The Monte Cup has had the field key out for its spring golfers for many years.

Like all top notch golf events there a 36 day limit on open visitors at Wollaston but for the convenience of non member golfers, has never been refused.

MANY ASKED

Hundreds of invitations have been sent out by the Wollaston Golf Club for the three day tournament in the event that any 2 to 4 golfers have been not booked, now not necessarily mean that they are ineligible for competition.

Golfers who have failed to receive invitations and who are desirous of playing on May 8th 9th and 10th could contact Elmer L. Winn, the club secretary, at Granite 2750.

In the event of the open to day, during which no round will be played, there will be a banquet for the contestants.

After the field has been reduced to semi-finalists, the eliminated teams will engage in a handicap medal play round.

Most of the outstanding four ball teams in this section will be in action at Wollaston and particular attention will be given to the handicapping of the competing pairs.

HOCKEY PREXY STIRS GHOSTS

By Bill Grimes

For the first time in my memory, President Frank Calder expressed an opinion contrary to that of a director in the National Hockey League, in his answer to Pres. C. F. Adams' protest of the officiating in the final Bruins-Maple Leaf game in Toronto.

And, therefore, I'm frank to admit that I do not believe that Calder was the author of that letter. To me it sounds more like a brain child of Elmer Ferguson, the publicity director of the N. H. L.

Although I thought Odie Cleghorn referred to Calder as one of two persons on earth I'd suspect might have cared enough about hockey to write such a letter, I was surprised at the statement alleged to have been penned by Frank Calder.

RECORD Entry List FOR BOUTS

A record entry list for the intercity bouts to be sponsored Monday night at the Arena by the Irish American A. A. was announced today Tom Kanahl, tourney director.

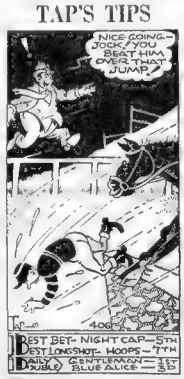
New York, Cleveland, Detroit and Buffalo pugilistic set battle local stalwarts in six classes.

Among the ring celebrities was Eddie Seidler, Detroit golden gloves champion as a bantam and one of the best amateurs ever sent out by the auto city.

Buffalo is to have Marcus Curtis, Arthur Fletcher and Tom Crawford to represent its interests.

Yesterday Yancey Henry, the Lynn heavyweight, was added to the list of those who will defend Boston's amateur fistic honor.

TAP'S TIPS



Terrier Track Dates Shifted

Dr. John M. Harmon, Boston University director of athletics announced two changes in the Terrier varsity track schedule.

The meet with Tufts has been moved up to May 1 and will be contested at Nickerson field. The dual meet with Norwich will be run at Northfield, Vermont on May 9.

Huskies Travel

The Husky yearling nine leaves to Dean academy this afternoon to open its season with the prep school nine. Coach Nelson Ramsdell plans to start Joe Callahan, ex-East Boston high ace, on the mound.

Penn's Power On Water a Mystery

Philadelphia, April 24 (AP)—Whatever hope Penn's varsity crew has of upsetting the apple cart when it meets Yale over a three-mile course on the Schuylkill river next April depends a great deal on the 150th anniversary regatta.

It will take a perfect combination for the Red and Blue varsity crew to upset the Bulldog champions, and even then the sudden condition of the Schuylkill river is going to make or fail what one crew lacks in weight and strength.

Every Quaker oarsman expressed a sensation by sweeping the Adams Cup of Boat Racing regatta on the river today a lap of Yale Coaches Princeton Harvard and Navy in a power full crew hauling.

Many of the critics for Penn's success last year was attributed to Lloyd Saxton, a stopping sweep. He's back again to weld the stroke and add it to the broad shoulders of the 172-pound open junior in Bob N. Y., the Coach Charlie Speiden is hoping.

167-Pound Average

Except for Frazier Hendrickson a 170-pounder, who is the only veteran of last year's crew, the Nos. 5 to 8 seats will be occupied by sophomores, who will average 167 pounds.

Cleveland's varsity boating for the Chicks Cup regatta against Columbia and Pennsylvania in New York tomorrow morning includes four 1935 varsity oarsmen and five members of lighter boats last year.

Fred Swanson of Buffalo N. Y., who is 6 ft. 2½ inches 175 pounds, and who will be in the bow. Oliver North will complete from the coxswain's perch.

The schedule April 25 Chicks Cup, Princeton and Columbia at New York. May 2 Stewart Cup Y. and Columbia at Derby. May 16 Adams Cup (Navy, M. I. T. and Harvard) at Worcester, Mass. May 30 American Henley (Yale, Cornell, Columbia, Navy, June 22, Poughkeepsie regatta.

Teachers' College Group at Relays

The first relay team ever to enter the Fitchburg Teachers College will be entered in the annual Penn relays which start today in Philadelphia.

The Fitchburg team consists entirely of Worcester men. The first team ever to represent the New England Teachers College in this event.

Dartmouth, Harvard and Yale are the other colleges from New England that will represent in the New England relays.

Of the 16 teams entered in the meet for the Teachers College competition the Fitchburg team drew fifth from the pole and is expected to be a good factor.

Dodgers May Lose Randy Moore

Brooklyn, April 24—The Dodgers could take little consolation in their bitter 10-inning victory over the Giants today as right fielder Randy Moore was badly hurt in the contest.

Moore former Boston star broke her right leg while trying to steal second in the second inning.

Physicians reported that it was more than likely that Moore will be out of the game for a long time, possibly the remainder of the season.

The Dodgers finally downed the Giants in the 10th after a stinging single by pinch hitter Sidney Gautreaux.

ANN MARSTERS' BEST BETS FOR TODAY

Every day can't be a winning day is an axiom which holds true in the life of a handicapper.

Col. E. R. Bradley's BOW AND ARROW was our only choice that won, paying $6.50 in the fourth at Havre. PEGGY SHIPPEN, a 10 to 1 shot, which we played win and place, ran third. YOUNG NATIVE and SEABISCUIT, odds-on choices at Jamaica, failed to win. TACK was scratched.

ANN MARSTERS' BETS

$2 Win Gean Conach, Jamaica 2nd.
$2 Win Dainger Lewis, Havre 3rd.
$2 Win Last Romance, Havre 6th.

Late Specials

$2 Win Crystal Prince, Jamaica 4th.
$2 Win Transporter, Havre 5th.

BANKROLL IS NOW $541.50. DAY'S PLAY $10

Our bankroll dropped to $541.50, but we're still out in front of the original bankroll of $500.

I'm betting $2 to win on DAINGER LEWIS, a first time starter in the third at Havre. LAST ROMANCE in the sixth at the same oval rates a wager.

GEAN CONACH appears well spotted in the second at Jamaica.

My late specials for this afternoon are CRYSTAL PRINCE in the fourth at Jamaica and TRANSPORTER in the fifth at Havre De Grace.

(At the suggestion of Walter O'Hara, Miss Marsters has set out to determine that conservative bets can result in satisfactory profits, or at worst small losses. Walter O'Hara, Narragansett Park owner, provided the capital with a $1000 gift. Half was turned over to the Boston Evening American Christmas Fund immediately. The remainder will be similarly handled at the end of the experiment. This is the twentieth day.)

WILSON'S BEST BET OF DAY

By Dave Wilson

(Selections made for fast track)

BEST BET—TRANSPORTER, FIFTH RACE

Havre de Grace, Md., April 24 — Transporter stands right out in the light in my figures over smart company in the one mile and a sixteenth of the fifth stanza here today.

FIRST RACE

Dixie Dora, Corvus, Royal Ballad

DIXIE DORA, making a seasonal debut, has only to run back to smart trials. She tapered off with an easy five panels in 1.03. CORVUS seasoned in Florida racing should offer the contention. ROYAL BALLAD did [illegible] only a few days back.

SECOND RACE

Cathy P., Ejector, Pass Em By

[illegible] CATHY P. [illegible] up second to Gold Band in her most recent endeavor. EJECTOR the main danger just missed drubbing [illegible] start. PASS EM BY is endowed with a world of speed [illegible] endurance in her [illegible] two starts.

FOURTH RACE

FIRETHORN [illegible] DARK HOPE another capable performer [illegible] the others. BILLY BEE should share in the spoils.

FIFTH RACE

Transporter, Night Cap, Phantom Fox

TRANSPORTER [illegible] NIGHTCAP. The latter [illegible] PHANTOM FOX, a Kentucky Derby eligible, is a keen possibility on brisk morning trials.

SIXTH RACE

Last Romance, Flying Dere, Tiempo

LAST ROMANCE'S last and only effort in this sector was in the nature of a conditioner. Since then the Jersey Stable color bearer has worked eight panels in 1.42 3-5 in handy fashion. FLYING DERE flashed excellent form in outfooting less capable company last trip. TIEMPO should hang on long enough to serve the minor award.

SEVENTH RACE

Sock Dologer, Idle Along, First Pigeon

SOCK DOLOGER came from out of the clouds to drub Peter Pumpkin in a swiftly run six furlongs last Wednesday. IDLE ALONG, on general form, shapes up as the main danger. FIRST PIGEON comes highly recommended by the clockers.

[illegible] the tournament's [illegible] the quarter-finals of the National Amateur last year and was given [illegible] consideration for a place on the Walker Cup squad. McHale however has confined his shooting [illegible]

Goodman, Scotty Campbell or Harry Givan of Seattle to top the amateurs now that Lawson Little has gone into golf as a business. Smith said. "But, if I had my choice of two young players to teach and develop, I'd take Haas and McHale.

"Both are sound golfers with fine swings and great competitive spirits. Both are in the early stages of development, and if they stick, should become standouts."

Hit New High

"What each needs," the two-time winner of Bobby Jones' masters' tournament elaborated, "is to become more rugged physically and to play a lot of stiff competitive golf under ideal conditions.

"The economic factor is McHale's biggest problem," Smith added, "but he has the stuff to overcome that. He had a night job in a bakery when I watched him and went directly from work to the golf course. Anyone who works all night and plays golf in the daytime loves the game well enough to get along."

Smith was modestly pleased with himself over his shooting in the winter tournament.

"I set my quota for the winter tournaments at $2000," he grinned, "but things broke my way and I did better than that, which was a pleasant surprise."

What the Stars Did

By the Associated Press

Dixie Walker and George Selkirk, Yankees—Their home runs, each with two men on base, led Yanks to win over Senators.

Sidney Gautreaux, Dodgers—His pinch single in the last half of the 10th gave Dodgers a victory over Giants.

Harry Kelly, Athletics—His three-hit pitching gave Athletics a 9-1 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Larry French, Cubs—Won pitchers' duel with Ralph Birkofer, scattering six hits to win over Pirates, 2-1.

Billy Myers, Reds—Hit a homer in the 10th, with Gilly Campbell on base, to beat Cards, 8-6.

Leo Norris, Phillies—Drove in three of his team's five runs to beat Bees, 5-3.

Johnny Allen, Indians—His seven-hit pitching shut out the White Sox.

Hank Greenberg and Elden Auker, Tigers—Former drove in four runs with three hits, and latter shut out Browns with six hits.

Nats Need Pitcher To Reach Top

New York, April 24 (AP)—Stanley (Bucky) Harris, manager of the Washington Senators, says his team would be a cinch for the first division of the American League if he had one more good pitcher.

He maintained [illegible] stand yesterday in a dugout that sounded like the grippe ward at a hospital, as coughs and sneezes of the players rang out while the [illegible] persistently shone on other parts of the Yankee Stadium.

"The pitching problem is perhaps the most acute one we have to contend with," said Harris. Earl Whitehill and Jimmy Deshong, two of my best flingers, are suffering from grippe and half the rest of the squad is feeling tough. We have an even chance to break into the first division, but we would be in sure if we had one more top pitcher. Give us a Lefty Grove, for instance, and you can't tell how far we would go."

Expecting a hot race, Harris refused to make any predictions concerning the pennant battle.

"The teams haven't settled into their stride yet," he commented. "The Red Sox look good, but they will have their troubles. The Tigers seem to be having their troubles already."

$40,500 to Victor In Kentucky

Louisville, Ky., April 24 (AP)—The money involved in the famous stake to be run at Churchill Downs for the 62d time Saturday week is really for more than the references to the $40,000 added purse would indicate.

The 20 odd thoroughbreds which will go to the post would average no less than $20,000 apiece over the counter. That's $400,000.

The purse itself is increased by [illegible] fees of $25 each [illegible] about 20 entry fees of $400 each making a probable purse of $[illegible].

The second horse will take $6000 of the [illegible] third $3000 and the fourth comes in for $1000, rather more than the every-day purse for [illegible]. The winner gets the rest by these estimates $40,550.

Churchill Downs puts up the $40,000 [illegible] so to speak. Horse [illegible] the rest of the pot. [illegible] persons are expected to crowd into Louisville to watch the Derby run. What they'll pay [illegible] the railroads and the hotels [illegible] for getting them here [illegible] code authority and the [illegible] but they'll pay the Downs not less than an average of a head for getting in.

That's $235,000 the management will get back for its $40,000. The track gets a cut on all money bet in the pari-mutuels. Another $100,000 [illegible] Also the track collects a neat rental per horse for the 1400 odd horses stabled in its barns.

On the other hand, the track must be maintained at great cost.

O'Boyne in Bout At Quincy Arena

Irish Jimmy O'Boyne of South Boston, middleweight boxing prospect, will meet Eddie "Kid" Sullivan of Walpole in the main bout at the Quincy Arena tonight.

O'Boyne yesterday afternoon finished his training by doing light work before an admiring throng at Boston's gym, Quincy, and Sullivan tapered off his pre-bout work with a short session on the light bag.

One of the largest crowds to sit in on a boxing show on the South Shore is expected to watch these two battlers fight it out.

Dominic Colantonio of Walpole, a stablemate of Sullivan and winner of his last main bout start at Quincy, will joust with Johnny Yagjian of Cambridge, victor in five straight comeback bouts and a terrific, right hand puncher, in the six-round semifinal encounter.

Benedict Arnold Life Story for Screen

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
[illegible]

Los Angeles, April 24—The story of Benedict Arnold, which was so widely discussed as a film possibility last year, is actually to be made by Paramount on a lavish scale with Wesley Ruggles directing, and Claudette Colbert playing the colorful role of Peggy Shippen. Randolph Scott will play George Washington. Benedict Arnold will be selected later.

Both Universal and Paramount claimed the right to film the life of America's most famous traitor, but apparently Universal has abandoned the idea, and Paramount is free to use the original story by Albert Shelby Levino. Mr Levino's idea is not to picture Arnold as an unforgivable traitor to his country, but rather to show something of the human side of the man. He also wants to bring in his early life and his romance with Peggy Shippen who later became Mrs Arnold. Recent-day historians are inclined to feel that Arnold was made to suffer unjustly by taking the blame for a brother officer's offense.

A few days before Ruth Chatterton left New York, her co-pilot, Bob Blair, suggested that she buy a two way radio for her plane. When Ruth was told that it would cost $2,000 she hesitated but finally took his advice. It is a lucky thing for her that she did. Although the weather reports had not been disturbing, just a few miles out of Harrisburg, they learned through the transmitter that the Alleghany mountains were impassable. So Ruth turned her plane around and came through the southern route. Two hours later only a few miles from where she had turned, the Ford Harveys crashed to their tragic death.

The very first picture to be made by Emanuel Cohen on his new Paramount contract is "Personal Appearance," the stage play which had so many Hollywood bidders, largely I suppose because it is a satire on a temperamental movie star supposed to be a composite picture of some of our film beauties. Gladys George played the lead on the stage for a solid year and made a name for herself. Cohen starts production on June 1 at the General Service Studios.

Chatter in Hollywood: There is a new Katie Hepburn on the RKO lot. Gone are the tantrums and eccentric looks that have characterized her and been so evident every time she has made a picture in the past. Confidentially I hear that it is due to Director John Ford's influence. He doesn't take her too seriously and has made no sign that he is impressed by her. The result is that Katie has been going out of her way to make a good impression. And she likes Ford's direction of "Mary of Scotland" so well that she is now requesting him to direct her again in "Portrait of a Rebel."

A European vacation is such an old story to most of our stars that they are now looking for new worlds to see. Kay Francis, by the way of example has gone abroad every summer to spend her holiday. This year she plans to leave in July and with a party of friends travel through Japan, China and Indo-China. She finishes "White Angel" this week and will make one more motion picture before she sails. And this trip, says Kay, will not be a honeymoon even though she has been reported engaged to Delmer Daves, popular Warner Brothers writer, again and again.

Plenty of Thrills in Films

By MARION FRENCH

Sy Bartlett and Ralph Block have done a very clever piece of work with the scenario on "Boulder Dam," one of the new films at Paramount and Fenway this week.

And Ross Alexander, Patricia Ellis and Lyle Talbot do some brilliant acting as featured players in this picture which deals with the experiences of a young laborer on the famous dam.

Ross Alexander has the fattest part in his screen career in "Boulder Dam." He does a good job of it. He is a Rusty, a cocky garage worker who suddenly finds himself in a lot of trouble following a fight with his boss.

Fleeing the "law," Rusty hits the town of Las Vegas, and after much hard luck, which he brings on himself for the most part, finds work on Boulder Dam. His redemption follows when he settles down to serious work because of love for an entertainer in the town played by blonde Patricia Ellis.

• • •

After a heroic act at the dam by which Rusty saves several lives he is promoted and becomes engaged to Ann, the singer. His rival for her affections turns out to be a chap who knows of the reformed boy's past. Lyle Talbot has the role of the rejected suitor. He threatens to reveal all he knows of Rusty, mistreats Ann, but fate intervenes and a happy ending seems in store for the engaged couple at the fade out.

This is a splendidly made film containing many thrilling sequences dealing with accidents which actually took place during the construction of the mighty dam. It has been splendidly directed by Frank McDonald and the entire cast as well as the featured players, Ross Alexander, Patricia Ellis and Lyle Talbot give excellent performances.

• • •

"Too Many Parents," the other picture at the Paramount and Fenway this week, has many sad moments. Its plot has to do with the pathetic situation of a small boy whose father neglects him, and a few bright and happy ones. The latter instances occur when a group of young military school students give a show and at the end of the film when little George Ernest's screen father Lester Matthews decides he does love his son after all.

Plays Role at Copley

Ruth Holden has one of the featured roles in "Storm Child" which continues to draw crowded audiences at at the Copley. "Storm Child" is a new play and had its world premiere at the Copley. There are plenty of thrills in it for the theater fans who love horror plays.

On Board the Titanic

Survivor of Great Disaster Tells a Thrilling Story

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Mrs. Margaret O'Neill of Jersey City, N. J., tells us today of her experiences in the greatest marine disaster of all times—the sinking of the ocean liner "Titanic." Mrs. O'Neill was a passenger on the maiden voyage of the ill-fated Titanic, when that huge liner—the largest of its day—struck an iceberg in mid-Atlantic and went to the bottom with twelve hundred souls!

The Titanic sank in April, 1912. She was the last word in ship construction and luxury and was considered the safest ship afloat and yet on her very first voyage from England to New York she sank within half an hour of hitting the berg.

We all remember the stories of how the brave ship's band remained at their posts and played "Nearer My God to Thee," as the ship sank; how millionaires and famous celebrities stood aside gallantly and gave their seats in lifeboats to women and children.

"Women and children first!" was the cry that went up from the slanting decks of the stricken liner that cold night, and the tales of heroism that came out of the doomed Titanic will live forever, to the eternal glory of the Anglo-Saxon race.

Margaret was born in Ireland, and, like the ship, was on her first voyage to the Land of Opportunity—America. She was accompanied by two other Irish girl friends of hers whose parents had confided them to Margaret's care.

"Alas!" Margaret says, "I must have been a poor guardian. I never saw either of them again after we arrived on deck when the ship struck. Both were drowned and their bodies never recovered."

The three girls were in their cabin in the third-class part of the ship. It was early Sunday evening. Most of the passengers were amusing themselves dancing or listening to the orchestra in the saloon, but one of Margaret's friends was seasick, so the others stayed with her.

They were in bed talking about what they would do when they got to New York when suddenly the ship shuddered and a rumbling, crushing sound startled them. The engines stopped for a minute and a terrible silence seemed to come over the boat.

Margaret sensed that something was wrong. She jumped out of bed and told the other girls to do likewise. While they were dressing they felt the engines start again and she began to think she had been unduly alarmed.

They laughed nervously and had decided to go back to bed when a loud rapping sounded on their stateroom door. An officer stood outside.

His face was as white as a sheet and he told the girls to get up on deck at once. The ship was sinking!

And what do you suppose the Irish girls did? They packed their suitcases! And they started out carrying them!

But the officer grabbed her by the arm and barked out an order. The boat was already filled to capacity, but two men who were in it immediately got up.

Their names, Margaret says, must have been with the men, because two women insisted on getting out with the men. One of them succeeded, but the other was held in place and Margaret was put in charge of the empty seats.

Later she was to learn that the two men and the woman went to their deaths. The thought hurts her to this day. If she had not arrived in time the boat would have taken the three others to safety as it did Margaret.

But the frightened Irish girl had no time to think of that then. The boat was being lowered. It caught—the way so many others did—and almost spilled its cargo of humanity into the sea. The waters were calm, fortunately, and the boat was launched. Margaret's penknife was used to cut the cords that bound the oars, and the sailors who manned the little boat pulled hard away from the sinking ship.

Margaret did not see the ship sink, but she heard it. A deep sighing noise came out of the night—a sound as though a thousand dying persons had breathed their last—a few notes of eerie music, and then—silence. The little lifeboat was alone in mid-ocean.

At least that's what it seemed to Margaret. Now and then they thought they saw lights and headed for them only to find "Will o' the Wisps" that faded away as they came closer. The long night wore on slowly. Women and children sobbed themselves into a fitful sleep. There was no water aboard and the salt air made them desperately thirsty.

But with the coming of dawn, Margaret says, her heart jumped into her throat. There, just a few miles from them, was a big steamer. Margaret, for a moment, hoped it was the Titanic still afloat. But the Titanic had disappeared forever.

The steamer was the S. S. Carpathia, which had come in answer to the Titanic S. O. S., too late to take off the victims aboard, but in time to pick up those lifeboats that were still afloat.

Margaret and the others in her boat were soon wrapped in blankets aboard the rescue ship and eventually landed in New York.

And that's the story of one Irish immigrant girl's sad entry into the New World—a story that she will never forget. And neither will I.

Tomorrow we're going to have another great yarn. Don't miss it.

LEWIS HANEY ON U. S. AFFAIRS

Our Government TRIES TO HOLD POWER By Buying Votes

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, April 24—It is reliably reported that the administration is making movie films designed to be shown during the campaign for the purpose of illustrating good things being done by Works Progress Administration workers.

WPA workers in New York have just prepared a profusely illustrated book to be used in our schools as propaganda in favor of public ownership of power plants.

Of course, our money is being used to pay for this stuff.

* * *

The book just referred to asks why so few farmers have electricity. It then answers the question for the pupil, saying that one reason is that private plants cannot make a profit on rural power lines. (This seems to be the only reason given.)

It says that engineers have "dreamed" of harnessing the tides, and now the government has started "to make this dream come true in Passamaquoddy Bay."

Its argument is that government power plants reduce the price of electricity to many consumers.

Clearly this is grossly one-sided propaganda. If electricity can't be sold to farmers for enough to cover the cost, why should it be given to them? If the Passamaquoddy project is a dream, why waste our money on it? (Fortunately in this case Congress woke up in time to stop further government dream finance.) If the government reduces the price of electricity below cost, who pays for the losses?

* * *

The long and short of it is that we are up against the old struggle of political dictators to dominate our economic life—the old attempt of a government to gain and maintain power by buying our votes.

In order to think straight about this issue, we must realize several facts.

First, "the government" is, in our practice, just some individual person or group of persons who are in office as "the administration." There is no mysterious entity—no omniscient mind. The real government is just a bunch of politicians. Roosevelt, Farley, Hopkins and Tugwell are, at the moment, practically "the government" of the United States.

* * *

Second, these persons were not selected on the basis of their notions about government power plants, WPA, etc. (I won't refer to the platform on which they did run for election, but merely remind you that the things they are now doing in wasting our money, and building up a political machine, are purely their own individual schemes.)

In fact, "the government" was not selected on the basis of its efficiency or knowledge concerning power plants or managing labor in industry. Why, then, should we suppose that the men who are "it" are qualified to do these things?

Would you buy stock in a company whose management's only known qualifications were political smoothness, "humanitarian" impulses, and a propensity to smile? Well, why expect miracles when the same men go to Washington?

* * *

Third, once in, the persons who run what you call "the government" bend their energies toward staying in. Their object is to get political results, not economic results. They are concerned with votes, not economy.

So they establish a bureaucracy of "yes men," build up an army of dole-receiving voters, and engage in propaganda.

They don't have to be efficient, or to count the cost of what they do. Why? Because they can pay their bills out of tax money. Or if they are sufficiently reckless, they can just raise forced loans, by getting control of the banking system and making it carry their I. O. U.'s.

Thus, with their "yes men" saying yes, and their dependent voters asking for largess, they "do something"—if it works, they do it some more; if it doesn't, they do something else.

* * *

Let's learn how to run our government, before we let it run us.

IMPORT Trade Gains HEAVILY

AGRICULTURAL GOODS LISTED

By Associated Press

Washington, April 24—A heavy increase in the American import trade, including a wide range of agricultural products, was reported today by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in a review of this branch of trade for 1935.

The foreign commerce section of the chamber attributed the increases to "non-resort by this country to wide arbitrary controls of import trade; returning domestic industrial activity, and the scarcity and high price levels of some foodstuffs."

Nearly 90 per cent of the 100 chief imports were larger than in 1934 in terms of value, the Chamber reported, while in terms of quantity, 86 per cent of the leading imports were larger.

The largest quantity of coffee ever brought into the United States in a year—1,750,000,000 pounds—imported during 1935, the review said.

This was 15 per cent in excess of the 1934 imports and 10 per cent greater than the 1930-31 average.

Other agricultural imports listed were:

38,870,000 bushels of wheat, 43,242,000 bushels of corn, 339,000 tons of wheat by-product feeds, 320,623,000 pounds of barley malt, 231,000,000 pounds of tapioca, sago and arrowroot.

"Imports of butter, attracted by high prices, were comparatively heavy, totalling 22,675,000 pounds in 1935, a quantity in excess of the 1934 imports."

American consumption of crude rubber set a record in 1935 with imports of 1,045,000,000 pounds. Imports of tin totalled 143,938,000 pounds, greatest since 1931.

"Indication of recovery in the United States," the chamber commented, "may be found in the record imports of diamonds, both for adornment and for industrial purposes. Our imports for 1935 amounted to 1,365,000 carats, by far the largest quantity ever imported."

PREDICT Retail Trade RISE

WHOLESALE BUYING UP

By Associated Press

New York, April 24—A rising volume of retail trade to a peak higher than Easter was forecast today by Dun & Bradstreet's weekly trade review.

"Shunting the expected recession in the wake of the Easter sales period, the encouraging recovery of consumer demand during the week provided evidence that the spring volume has yet to reach its peak," it was stated.

"The rise in retail distribution was in close alignment with the extension of the upward trend in wholesale buying, which was carried close to the best weekly record of the year, as the acquisition of summer goods gained momentum and reorders spread to more diversified items.

"Instead of bringing the spring buying period to a peak, Easter apparently marked the inauguration of a prolonged season. Except on the days when cold weather exercised a restraining influence, there was a sharp rebound in sales of women's coats, suits, dresses and shoes."

* * *

All cities reported retail sales larger than for the week preceding, it was found.

"When compared with the corresponding period of 1935, which was the post-Easter week, the estimated gain for the country, as a whole, ranged from 8 to 15 per cent," the report showed.

"Continuing the rise that started during the week preceding, buying in many of the wholesale markets reached the best volume for the year. With preparations based on the likehood of but slight shrinkage in retail distribution during the summer months, due to the payment of the veterans' bonus and the widening of industrial operations, merchants have enlarged their budgets for second and third quarter commitments."

Files With SEC

Dividend

Anaconda Wire & Cable declared a dividend of 25 cents, payable June 15 to stock of record May 15. The company resumed dividends on Jan. 29, 1936, with a 25 cent declaration.

Bar Silver

London, April 24 (AP)—Bar silver firm, 1-16 higher at 20 7-16d. (Sterling price equivalent to 45.42 cents.)

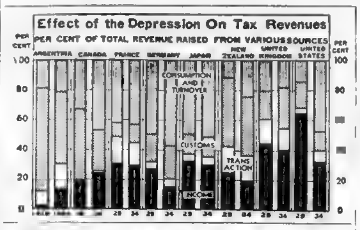
TAX STRUCTURES



ALTERED

Depression Has Great Effect

The depression has altered the tax structures of every country shown in the chart.

In their efforts to secure more revenue all the countries with the exception of England have increased their consumption and turnover taxes.

These taxes are commonly known as retail sales taxes.

In the United States this form of taxation has provided an increase in revenue from 13.6 per cent in 1929 to 47.7 per cent in 1934.

Argentina and Canada are the only two countries showing gains in revenue from property and income in 1934 as compared with 1929.

Property and income revenue in the United States dropped from 65.7 puer cent in 1929 to 33.2 per cent in 1934. A loss of 32.5 per cent, which was offset by the gain of 34.1 per cent in revenues from retail sales taxes.

Countries showing a decline in property and income revenue from 1929 to 1934 have, to some extent covered this loss in revenue by generally increasing consumption and turnover or sales taxes.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, April 24—Persistent heaviness of bank shares since publication of first quarter condition reports reflects renewed uneasiness over dividend prospects, according to dealers.

Although most large local institutions earned their initial three months dividend requirements, recognition is being given the fact that the showing was helped by substantial recoveries against previously written-off assets.

There is no assurance that the banks will be able to benefit in a similar way the current three months. Unless profits from regular banking operations improve prior to the next dividend meetings, some institutions will be faced with the alternative of reducing payments to shareholders or drawing heavily upon surplus funds to pay existing rates.

Building Supply Earnings Poorer

Another illustration of the unwarranted exuberant estimates of first quarter corporation reports was furnished yesterday in the statement of Certain-Teed Products. This marked the second building supply company which reported results far below Wall Street's expectations. The statement showed a considerable larger loss the first quarter this year than in the same three months of 1935, despite all that has been written about the tremendous revival in building operations. An official statement said the Certain-Teed earnings were affected by a substantial increase in the cost of raw materials accompanied by competitive price disturbances in several products. However, it was explained, a considerable betterment has taken place this month with current prices about 18 per cent above the recent lows.

Conversion Offer Aids Placing Bonds

Popularity of convertible bond issues has made the distribution of new convertibles much easier for dealers this year than has been the case with straight mortgage bonds lacking conversion. This popular liking for the convertible bond was noticeable yesterday in the premium at which the new Youngstown Sheet & Tube 3½s were being subscribed. Dealers who found that much attention was being paid to the convertible debentures followed the practice of offering to those who would buy the convertibles twice as much of the first mortgage 4s. As a consequence, a further avenue of distribution was found for the first 4s, since to acquire the convertibles many prospective buyers took their allotment of the first 4s. The reason for dealers asking customers to take twice as many firsts was the fact that there were $60,000,000 first 4s in the issue and only $30,000,000 of 3½s.

Northwestern Traffic Outlook

Chicago & North Western Railway's freight traffic currently is running about 11 per cent ahead of a year ago, which compares with a 11.4 per cent loadings increase forecast for the Northwest for the current quarter by shippers. The North Western, which covered only about 34 per cent of charges in 1935 and is reorganizing under Section 77B, has experienced increases in gross, and improved net operating income, though the carrier's net loss after charges and taxes is running larger than a year ago. For the first two 1936 months gross was in excess of $12,500,000, against $10,700,000 in the like 1935 period, and operating net was $875,185, against $109,444. This operating net gain largely was picked up in February when the figure was $960,000, against $52,000 in February 1935. For the first two months of the year, the road had net loss after charges and taxes of $3,494,209, against $2,559,801 in the like 1935 period. Favorable factors in the road's freight picture include increases of 120 per cent in fresh fruit loadings and 44 per cent in grain traffic forecast for the Northwest this quarter. Unfavorable factors include decreases of 63.4 per cent in movement of hay, straw and alfalfa, and 23.3 per cent in automobiles, trucks and parts.

Edison of Boston Reports Earnings

The Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston reports for the 12 months ended March 31, 1936, income balance after all charges of $4,919,393, equal to $9.19 a share on 534,875 shares of stock.

This compares with income balance of $5,308,710 in 12 months to March 31, 1935, or $9.92 a share on the same amount of stock.

Bond Market Drifts Lower

New York, April 24 (INS)—The bond market drifted irregularly lower in moderately active dealings today, the list being unsettled by liquidation of rail liens and several of the more speculative industrial issues.

Florida East Coast 4½s led the way in the carrier section, slumping more than 3 points to 63 before meeting support. Chicago & Northwestern 6½s dropped a point, while Buffalo & Rochester 4½s, Southern Railway 6½s, Denver Rio Grande 5s, Illinois Central 4s and New Haven 6s were fractionally under last night's final prices.

A few rails, including N. Y. Central 5s, Lehigh Valley 4s and Nickel Plate 4½s, were slightly higher.

Wall St. Hears

New York, April 24 (INS)—That earnings of Sears, Roebuck (S) in the six months ending July 31 may approximate $2.30 a share.

That first quarter net of Van Raalte (VRT) was close to $1.50 a share.

That establishment of a regular dividend rate by General Asphalt (AS) is possible in the near future.

That Texas Gulf Sulphur (TG) profits in the half-year will be well above $1 a share.

CHANGE In Federal POLICY

BUSINESS MEN CONFUSED

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

New York, April 24—The tendency of the federal government to change horses in midstream adds to the confusion of business men.

In business calculations, the taxing power of the Government becomes an increasingly important factor.

In determining its financial set-up, management seeks to adjust itself to the shifting fashions of Federal policy.

When there is a radical change or reversal of policy, business is accordingly disturbed.

Such a change is implicit in the punitive undivided profits tax now under consideration by the House of Representatives.

It deals with current and future profits, not with past accumulations.

Accordingly, it tends to discriminate against good behavers in the corporate field which have heretofore adhered to the spirit and the letter of prior tax laws against building up unreasonable surpluses. On the other hand, it tends to put a premium on companies which in the past have successfully evaded the law.

In other words, a corporation which ignored the inhibition against building up unreasonably large surpluses, and which now has huge reserves, is in a better position under the proposed law than a company which has faithfully followed the statute in the past and distributed all earnings except a "reasonable" surplus.

Another instance of a reversal of Federal policy relates to the position of holding companies, which are frowned upon—and in some instances sentenced to death—in the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935. On the other hand, as recently as 1928, Congress, in writing the Revenue Act, seemed to put its stamp of approval on holding companies. In fact, it made enjoyment of the privilege of making consolidated tax returns contingent on having a common corporate parent, or top holding company.

Apparently business virtue is no absolute quality, but exists only in relation to time and place.

With the elimination of our so-called favorable balance of trade in goods during the first quarter, as foreign nations sought to cut down imports and build up their home economy, it is interesting to learn that our own Hawaii is proving herself to be a hundred million dollar market for goods from the mainland.

Only six countries Great Britain, Canada, Japan, France, Germany and Italy are larger buyers of American products— and the comparison is hardly fair, since the foreign exports also include shipments from Hawaii as well as from continental United States.

Last year Hawaii's purchases from the mainland included

Electrical refrigerators	$525,178
Electric flatirons	16,267
Electric washers	108,216
Electric ranges	36,427
Gas stoves and heaters	89,936

In relating the significance of this market, an intimate observer of Hawaiian affairs recently told me:

"Hawaii's 77,000 families speak American, think American and buy American. Honolulu is no longer merely a tourist resort of beauty and romance. It is a modern city in an ideal climatic setting, advancing, stride by stride, with its sister cities of the Pacific Coast."

Freight Loadings Up in Week

Washington, April 24 (AP)—The Association of American Railroads reported today loadings of revenue freight for the week ending last Saturday totaled 642,657 cars.

This was an increase of 20,519 cars, or 3.3 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 31,516, or 5.2 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 50,952 or 8.6 per cent, compared with two years ago.

The week's loadings of various classifications, giving comparisons with preceding week, and correspondingg week a year ago, follow:

THE STOCK SUPPLY

Tendency TO CONTRACT Evident

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

In troubled market times, such as the present, a review of underlying forces is a necessity. It helps investors to maintain their perspective while serving as an analytical test of long term bull ideas.

For our part we think that once it is agreed business and trade trends will ultimately point higher, it is best to seek reasons for an increase in the supply of stocks.

We do not see anything indicating the supply of stocks in important hands is finding its way marketward. There are four great influences that have been steadily working toward a drying up of supplies. We believe that these will again become operative as stock prices experience a normal intermediate recession after more than a year-long upswing.

* * *

First of the four influences on stock supplies, and the one which will lose force for normal reasons as recovery spreads, is corporation buying for own account. Some stock held in company treasuries will undoubtedly find its way back into public hands through stock dividends, etc., but not in alarming amounts. Second influence is that of reorganizations and recapitalizations, whose definite and irrevocable reducing of stock supplies is already in evidence. Third influence is the buying of trusts, estates and institutions. Seeking inflation hedges, this buying is semi-permanent through necessity, and holdings must be retained regardless of intermediate fluctuations. Fourth, foreigners still like American security and securities. Our troubles are small compared with their potential grief.

* * *

Comments: From the above we conclude that the present stock supply is small in comparison with demand . . . Not only that but it will decrease as favorable buying opportunities are presented . . . And the demand factor will be rather regularly aided by creation of new surpluses as recovery gathers momentum . . . Hence why take anything other than a long term view embracing a belief in ultimately higher stock prices . . . And why abandon it until there is positive proof the incentives governing these forces are waning.

* * *

With such a background it is easier to take a calm view of recent declines. The reaction is overdue. But it is also traceable to what we call an advance case of the jitters. Dreaded events are assumed as certain to happen. Because the widely expected rarely happens maybe there will not be a new business blasting tomorrow night, as the rumor mongers say; nor will France vote "red," and fall from the graces of gold; nor will the Supreme Court declare the Guffey Act constitutional, as the sellers professed to fear.

* * *

Notebook: The above list is about as imposing an array of "unpredictable" events as we have seen in many a day . . . And if anything happens to spoil the gloomy picture we can not help but think of the wonderful technical shape the market will be in for the reception of more optimistic news . . . Instead of dwelling in such a pessimists' heaven we much prefer to keep our feet on the ground, face realities and watch for opportunities to again buy into promising situations . . . All we ask is some definite clue as to the intention of the industrial group . . . Will it hold above the resistance noted yesterday?

SOFT COAL Output Higher

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended April 18 as approximately 6,625,000 net tons, against 5,933,000 tons a year ago and 5,829,000 tons in the same 1934 week.

Report of the bureau of mines shows production of 6,415,000 tons for the week ended April 4, and 7,335,000 for the week ended April 11, 1936.

MARKET Price Trend LOWER

FEW RALLYING THRUSTS

New York, April 24—A few rallying thrusts today were generally ineffective in piercing the stock market's gloom.

While resistance to further selling pressure was shown by scattered issues, losses of fractions to a point or so predominated near the start of the fourth hour.

After a steady opening prices began to slip rapidly and at one time the ticker tape fell behind 4 minutes. A recovery movement then got under way and trading turned quiet.

Such shares as American Can, Loew's, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Texas Corp. worked higher. Chrysler got up more than a point, dropped back and then firmed again.

Among the losers were U. S. Steel, eBthlehem, N. Y. Central, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Case, Westinghouse, Air Reduction, Johns-Manville, Anaconda, American Smelting and Seaboard Oil. General Motors was about unchanged, along with many of the utilities.

Bonds were irregularly lower. Commodities improved. Foreign currencies, on the whole, were fairly steady. At the same time gold shipments from France were understood to have been arranged as the franc held at the level at which the yellow metal can be moved to New York at a profit.

Mixed Items

Brokers held to the belief that the impending French elections were having much to do with the nervousness of equities.

Debate on the new corporation tax bill in Congress was again pointed to as a depressing influence for the financial sector, although it was thought in some quarters later clarification of the measure might bolster sentiment.

It was noted that Dun & Bradstreet's weekly review was exceptionally optimistic for a rising volume of retail trade which was expected to top that of Easter.

The survey stressed the recovery of consumer demand following the levelling off period subsequent to the holidays. Wholesale distribution, it was said, made one of the best showings of the year as orders for summer goods were stepped up substantially.

Business gains for the country as a whole were estimated at from 8 to 15 per cent ahead of the corresponding 1935 aggregate.

The Federal Reserve statement for the week ended April 22 disclosed that brokers' loans dropped some $11,000,000, apparently reflecting the downward drift of stocks. Excess reserves of member banks rose $90,000,000, owing largely to further heavy disbursements by the Treasury.

The French franc, at 6.58½ cents, was up .00⅛ of a cent at the beginning of foreign currency dealings, and sterling was ⅛ of a cent firmer at $4.93⅝.

BROKERS' Loans Decline

Brokers' loans by member banks in New York City for their own account in the week ended April 22 decreased $11,000,000 to $1,036,000,000.

Loans on securities by New York City member banks in recent weeks compare as follows (000,000 omitted):

	April 22	April 15	1935 April 24
To brokers in N Y	$ 969	$ 980	$ 791
Elsewhere	67	67	56
Total	1,036	1,047	847
To others	730	727	742
Total	1,766	1,774	1,589

These loans do not include loans made for account of other banks, corporations or individuals. Loans are not broken down into time loans and demand loans.

Washington Notebook

Washington, April 24 (AP)—A sharp rise was recorded for March in the Commerce Department's preliminary index of the value of automobile retail sales.

Adjusted for seasonal variation, it stood at 100.5 per cent of the 1929-31 average, compared with 89.5 in February and 94.5 in March, 1935, making a year-to-year gain of 17 per cent.

Commerce reports say German exports of motor vehicles last year set a record. Passenger car shipments totaled 19,631, against 10,994 in 1934 and 4039 in 1929. Trucks numbered 3765, compared with 2242 in 1934 and 2975 in 1929.

Treasury figures disclose that about half the national bank notes in circulation a year ago, when plans for discontinuing their use were announced, have been retired. The amount outstanding has dropped below $400,000,000. Part of the book profit from revaluation of the dollar in gold was set aside for repayment of the notes.

Cotton cloth imports in the first quarter increased to 29,594,000,000 square yards valued at $2,637,000 from 21,529,000 worth $2,266,000 in the comparable period last year, Commerce figures show.

STOCK Holdings GAIN

LIST INSURANCE INVESTMENTS

New York, April 24—A comparison of the 1935 distribution of fire insurance company investments with 1930 discloses a sharp reduction in holdings of bonds and an increase in holdings of stocks, particularly in the industrial field, according to a current survey by the Standard Statistics Company of New York.

While the increase was partly the result of a more rapid gain in the prices of industrial stocks, it also indicated new purchases in the field, representing a partial switch from bonds.

The following table compares the proportion of various investments in company portfolio and also gives the distribution of common stocks as of December 31:

	Percent 1935	Percent 1930
Cash	6.7	5.5
U. S. Govt. securities	8.8	6.9
Real estate mtgs. and loans	5.4	6.1
Bonds (excluding govt.)	22.0	30.0
Stocks	55.2	51.5
Insurance	16.1	12.5
Bank	3.9	5.5
Railroad common	3.6	7.5
Railroad preferred	2.3	2.4
Utility common	3.8	4.1
Utility preferred	4.3	4.1
Industrial common	17.3	11.5
Industrial preferred	4.7	4.0

Investment policies of fire insurance companies are not uniform, of course, and individual analysis is necessary to the proper determination of probable future investment prospects.

Average diversification indicated for the 20 companies covered in this survey as of the close of 1935, however, showed that due consideration was given to both income and appreciation factors.

Comments of Brokers

The market may be said to be experiencing a fresh test of the support levels of March; the outcome of which can be expected to exert an important influence upon speculative sentiment with respect to the intermediary trend.—J. E. Malloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

It is wise to wait for the market to stabilize before adding to commitments particularly in view of possible political news domestic and foreign over the week-end. However, taking a longer term view the oils, coppers and aviation stocks appear to be in a buying range right here.—J. S. Wilson, Josephthal & Co.

We can vision no immediate stimulus in the nearby future which could result in a definite change of the present market pattern, and believe that activity will be confined to the day-to-day trader who speculates for the minor swings.—R. S. Feigus, Prentice Blauner & Brady.

Quick-turn traders should be on the alert to make purchases of active leaders for a turn in early future if a real selling climax materializes.—H. D. Comer—Paine, Webber & Co.

This might be a good time to remember that breaking of important support of supply levels often is followed by temporary reversal.—G. M. P. Murphy & Co.

The French elections may well result in more troubled times in Europe. Deflation has undermined the influence of the conservative classes in France to a substantial degree and, if this is unmistakably shown in the results of the voting, there can be no doubt but the panic criers in our markets will make much of it.—F. H. Richardson—Southgate & Co.

Britain BALANCES Budget

By B. C. Forbes

Business men have to face facts. They have to make ends meet—or be cast aside.

It is because the British government is very largely composed of men richly experienced in stern realities of business and industry that it has all along taken a more realistic attitude towards depression facts and finances than has been taken by our own administration, so tragically lacking in understanding of practical affairs, lacking in training in the bread-and-butter problem of filling pay envelopes, lacking in first-rank achievement in any field whatsoever.

Britain's government policies have proved more fruitful than ours during the last three-four years. Economic recovery there has eclipsed ours. And a balanced budget was restored several years ago.

* * *

Now, what has happened this week?

Amid thunderous popular applause, the British government recently announced a most comprehensive armament-building program. Hardly had the hurrahs subsided when Chancellor of the Exchequer Chamberlain reveals that income and other taxes will have to be immediately increased to meet the bill. He insists that provision be made to balance the budget, with at least something to spare.

Washington, on the other hand, has increased its expenditures far more drastically than did Britain, but has chosen the easy way of simply borrowing billion after billion without making provision for repayment.

True, the tax burdens of Americans have been greatly increased by our bewildering multiplicity of taxing bodies, but expenditures have been so swollen that appalling deficits are constantly accumulated.

The idea of instituting rigid economy and of striving sincerely to cut down the long-continued federal deficit of $10,000,000 daily possesses no appeal for those at present in power at Washington.

* * *

Chamberlain's announcement that increased spending entailed immediately increased taxation was not particularly palatable to British taxpayers. But the government did not flinch.

The tax measure now before our own Congress is meant to appeal to the masses. It is officially represented, as most New Deal policies have been represented, as designed to "soak the rich."

Its unsoundness and uncertainties have been abundantly disclosed. Its yield admittedly is sheer guesswork. That it would, if enacted, hurt young, small, struggling concerns more than strongly-entrenched corporations is now generally admitted.

But, since it is expected by its sponsors to evoke the approval of those unversed in economics and finance, it is still being officially supported.

Our next administration, whether Democratic or Republican, will have to face realities as Britain has already faced them. Billion-dollar over-spending, billion-dollar borrowing cannot be maintained for four years more at the rate indulged in during the present regime.

Many thought the canny Cal Coolidge renounced re-election because he was sure the national picnic was about over.

Would Franklin D. Roosevelt exercise shrewdness were he also to sidestep?

* * *

Business sees no prospect of relief through early adjournment of Congress.

* * *

Tax collectors have accustomed taxpayers to queer actions. But surely this one takes first prize:

New York city collector's office has served notice that if delinquent taxes upon the Manhattan approaches to the George Washington bridge across the Hudson are not paid, half of the bridge will be sold!

It won't be because of indifference among America's newspaper publishers if the rights, the liberty of press and people be further jeopardized and snoopocracy be further enthroned by political autocrats.

New England Police Stories

'Death Laughs Last'

As Told by Ace Crime Reporters

Chance Turned Up 'Kid Killers' of Police Officer

This is the 80th in a series of true detective stories from New England police annals being presented daily by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Henry L. Daily, one of the ace reporters for the American and Sunday Advertiser, relates this gripping story, "Death Laughs Last!"

By HENRY L. DAILY

When he saw the little .25 caliber pistol in the curly headed youngster's hand, Police Officer Comeau had to laugh.

'Put that thing down, kid," he chuckled, "or I'll knock it down."

A moment later, Comeau was lying in the street, with a bullet through his heart. Last laugh, that night, was death's. And the joke—a grim one—was on Comeau!

The officer, himself, never spoke after the steel-jacketed slug from the tiny, toylike automatic crashed into his chest.

It was necessary, therefore, for investigators to reconstruct the circumstances of the killing, depending in part upon the testimony of witnesses and in part upon a knowledge of Patrolman Frank J. Comeau's character.

Witnesses told their stories at the Fields Corner station house, even as police of that division were vainly combing the neighborhood for trace of the killer and his pals.

The shooting had taken place, bystanders said, almost directly across the street from the station house garage.

Comeau, who had been on duty as patrol wagon driver, had strolled over to a small automobile which had appeared to be stalled at the curb.

The officer had talked for a minute or two with three youths, who had been trying to get the car's engine going.

Then Comeau had motioned toward the station house, as if suggesting that the boys accompany him there.

In regard to what had happened next, witnesses were at variance. Guns had appeared, at any rate. There had been the sudden sound of a gun. And Comeau, groaning "oh! oh!" had fallen.

Trio Flee

The three youths had abandoned the stalled machine and had fled on foot, vanishing into the darkness.

Fields corner police, themselves, knew the rest of the story. Rushing across the street, they had found Comeau lying on his right side, unconscious. He was not in full uniform, but was wearing regulation blue trousers, a brown beach jacket and his uniform cap.

Under the prostrate officer's body was the murder weapon, a .25 caliber Colt automatic pistol, small but deadly.

While an ambulance was rushing Comeau to City Hospital—uselessly, as it proved—an examination was made of the automobile near which the killer and his friends had been working.

It had been stolen, of course. A check-up on the registration plates soon established that. An overheated engine had stalled the machine.

Comeau's own revolver was missing. The empty holster had been in his side when Comeau had been loaded into the ambulance.

"Guessing what happened isn't so hard," one of Comeau's buddies commented. "T' - kids were over here fussing with their hot motor.

"Frank Comeau, being a mechanic and a good guy, came to see if he could help. He must have got suspicious that the car was stolen, so, of course, he ordered the youngsters to the station.

"The kids pulled guns. Maybe, Frankie pulled his. But he wouldn't be taking the pinch very serious. Hell, Frankie was an overseas vet and an expert marksman. If he had wanted to shoot, no young punks would ever have got the drop on him.

"Chances are he thought the kids were trying a movie act and didn't really mean business. He was wrong about that. They let him have it, then they ran.

"The fellow that pulled the trigger dropped his automatic. Grabbing for it, he probably got Comeau's gun instead. Anyhow, it's missing."

Accurate Guess

As guesses go, the guesses of Comeau's brother officers were pretty accurate.

That was established later.

In the meantime, city and state police departments buckled diligently down to the job of rounding up the guilty gunmen and his associates.

PETERMAN'S DISCOVERY

The task was difficult, for the very reason that the crime wasn't one likely to have been committed by bandits of professional standing.

It wasn't a "smart" shooting; it was a dumb one, a shooting obviously having resulted from impulse.

It was a shooting which might be attributed to almost any foolkid suffering from a half-baked John Dillinger complex.

Yet, on the other hand, there was a chance that the killer and his pals weren't as young as witnesses thought. Maybe they were "wise," full of dope. Maybe, they were hard guys from some other district, "taking it on the lam." Their hot reputation might account for them stopping, by accident, right in front of a police station.

Week after week, however, the Comeau murder mystery remained a mystery.

Suspects were picked up by the dozen, only to be released after fu-questioning.

Underworld resorts were closely watched, but without successful results.

Stool pigeons—unofficial eyes and ears of the division of inspectors—were urged to be extra vigilant. But they had nothing to report.

Law of Chance

Yet leagued, all this time, against the slayer and his accomplices, were the workings of one of the greatest of all laws—the law of probabilities.

That's the law which makes gambling house proprietors rich and gambling hoodlums broke.

It's the law which decrees that three and not the likeliest zero will come up, every so often, at the roulette table.

It's the law which inevitably, in the long run, gives the "breaks" in a murder case to the police instead of to the killer.

Somewhere in the 120,000,000 law-abiding citizens of the United States, behind the police are 120,000,000 law-abiding citizens.

From among the 120,000,000 persons who might have helped bring to justice Patrolman Comeau's slayer, fate picked Mrs. William Sullivan of Ocean street, Lynn.

Mrs. Sullivan and her friend, Dr. Marion C. Burrow, also of Ocean street, saw three strange young men carrying suitcases out of the Ocean street home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Howe.

"That's funny," commented Mrs. Sullivan. "I know the Howes are away. These boys look like burglars. I'm going to call the police."

She did call the police!

And the three boys were burglars!

Two of them got away. But Officers John E. Scannell and Charles E. Burrill, in a prowl car, captured the third.

When they searched the prisoner, they found on his person a loaded .25 caliber revolver. The young burglar said his name was Stanley B. Toothaker. He gave a Roxbury address.

The questioning to which he was subjected at Lynn police headquarters began as a routine procedure but developed rapidly into a business of absorbing importance.

Ten Hours Later

Ten hours later, to a group of officers, including detectives and "hot shots" of the police departments of both Lynn and Boston, Toothaker made an alleged "confession," naming Patrolman Comeau's killer and giving full details of the shooting of Toothaker's pals in part.

"On the night of March 24 of this year (1936), Al Deshon, Bob Sambursky and I broke into a house in Mattapan and stole some radio batteries.

"These were too heavy to carry, so we hid them under a piazza and I stood guard while Al and Bob stole an automobile. It was an old Ford sedan, and it didn't run any too good.

"We took the batteries and started for Roxbury. On what I now know was Dickens street, the auto engine got hot and noisy and the car finally stalled on Deshon, who was driving.

"There was a fellow standing across the street, wearing a cap and a kind of sweater. It was Comeau, the cop, but we thought he was a fireman or something. He walked over to where we were, and Deshon asked him if he knew anything about autos so he could help us get our car started again.

"Comeau said he guessed he could help us, but then he began to get curious and he wanted the car's registration papers and Deshons' driving license.

"Al said, 'It's my brother's car and all the papers age home.'

"'Yeah?' said Comeau, 'Well, you'd better all come over to the station house and tell the lieutenant about it.'

Guns Out!

"By this time, Al and Bob both had their guns out. Each of them was carrying a .25 caliber automatic.

"Comeau had his gun out, too, but he didn't act excited or anything. He just laughed at Deshon, who was nearest to him, and he said, 'Put that thing down, kid, before I knock it down.'

"But Deshon grabbed for Comeau's right hand, that had the gun in it, and he shoved Comeau's arm up, so the gun was pointing into the air.

"Comeau was grabbing for Deshon's gun, too. Then Deshon's gun went off. Comeau said, "Oh! Oh!," sort of groaning, and he crumpled right down to the ground.

"Deshon said, 'My God, now I've done it!' We all started running.

"We wanted to get some different clothes, so we wouldn't be recognized. We broke into a house not very far away, but we couldn't find anything to fit us. We got $5 in cash.

"Finally, we went back home to Roxbury, where Deshon, Sambursky and I all live. After that night, we met almost every day and we broke into a lot of places. I guess 15 or 20 in all. We were trying to get $2000 together, so we could all leave the country.

"A lot of the stuff we stole was stuff we wanted for our canoe. We keep that at a boathouse on the Charles river. We were planning to get a camping outfit together and lay low for a while.

"Subway Hangout"

"During the cold weather, we've been using the dead end of the old subway at Broadway, South Boston, for a hangout."

Acting on the information furnished by Toothaker police expected to make short work of capturing Deshon and Sambursky.

The fugitives, however, proved strangely elusive although officers raided the South Boston subway "hangout" and made a thorough search of Charles river camps and boathouses.

The canoe of which Toothaker had spoken was found without difficulty. In it were stolen pillows, a stolen radio, a tent, blankets, cooking utensils and several boxes of food. In a sugar can was a box of revolver cartridges.

Toothaker, meantime, had led Boston police to a cache in the Fellaway reservation, near Spot pond, and had shown the officers where to find no less than six revolvers and pistols, with ammunition to fit them.

These guns, Toothaker said, had been stolen by Deshon, Sambursky and him.

All this, however, wasn't bringing Deshon and Sambursky into the police net.

Chance Again!

But again to the assistance of the authorities came one of the nation's 120,000,000 law-abiding citizens.

This time, it was Franklin Webber of Paris street, East Boston.

"My wife and I take roomers," he told police. "And right now we've a couple of tough youngsters in our house, and they are acting suspicious.

"When they first came to hire a room, they said they had picked our place because it was near a church.

"But next day was Sunday and, when I went upstairs to fix a radiator, these boys had a pack of cards and a lot of loose change and they were gambling.

"I said, 'That's not very nice on the Sabbath, is it?'

"One of the boys answered me back, real nasty.

"The hell with that Sunday stuff,' he said.

"They behaved so funny, I told my wife to keep away from them. They don't go out, hardly at all, in the day time. They eat in their room, and the assortment of food they've got looks as if they had stolen it."

East Boston police were inclined to dismiss Webber's suspicions as unfounded, but Mrs. Webber told her story, too, and was insistent that her "tough" roomers be interviewed and questioned. She said she thought they might be the Comeau slayers, whose descriptions had been published in the newspapers.

Front Door Open

Captain James F. Hickey of the East Boston station told Mrs. Webber to go back to her house—which was directly across the street—and leave the front door open if the youthful suspects were in their rooms.

Following Mrs. Webber, Patrolman Frank McNamara and Special Officers James Driscoll and Herbert Patterson had just reached the Webber hallway when they ran into Deshon and Sambursky, face to face, recognizing them instantly.

Deshon attempted to draw a gun, but failed to reach his weapon before being overpowered. Sambursky surrendered without a struggle, although he, too, had a loaded automatic pistol concealed under his coat.

Having Toothaker's alleged confession with which to confront the newly captured pair, police were not long in obtaining confessions from Deshon and Sambursky, also.

Their stories were, in substance, like that told by Toothaker. Only disagreements were concerning details of the actual shooting.

Deshon admitted having fired the fatal bullet.

"I didn't mean to kill Comeau," he said. "I covered him with my automatic and I told him to step into the alley. He wouldn't do it, though. He just laughed at me and called me a kid and said for me to put up my gun or he'd slap me down and take it away from me. Then we started wrestling, he tried to grab my pistol and it went off. The sight caught in Comeau's sweater as he fell. He dropped his gun, too, and I picked it up. Later, I threw it away."

The Toothaker, Deshon and Sambursky "confessions" apparently wrote finis to the Comeau case as a police problem.

Yet a Suffolk county jury, when the three boys went on trial for murder, found Toothaker and Sambursky not guilty and found Deshon only guilty of manslaughter.

Protest Rises

The youth of the defendants and Deshon's claim that the killing had been accidental were apparent reasons for the jury's leniency.

Three immediately arose, as was to be expected, a storm of public indignation, with the police commissioner and the district attorney bewailing what they said was a "grave miscarriage of justice."

The court, however, were not through with the accused trio.

On counts of burglary and of armed robbery, to which Deshon and Sambursky pleaded guilty, Judge Fosdick sentenced them to life imprisonment.

Previously imposed upon Deshon had been a sentence of from 19 to 20 years imprisonment for manslaughter.

Imposing the life terms, Judge Fosdick said, in part:

"The function of this court is to protect the public. Although these two young men may not be hardened criminals, they have proven themselves dangerous to society. They have a mental balance wheels. I am going to put them where they can do no more harm during the rest of their lives. The question of their possible reformation I will leave in the hands of the pardoning powers."

Toothaker, Judge Fosdick let off with a five year to seven year sentence for burglary. Having served it, however, the young prisoner was promptly arrested on Essex County indictments, charging him with burglary in Lynn and with unlawful possession of a loaded revolver.

Pleading guilty to these counts, he was sentenced to state prison for a term of from nine and a half to 12 and a half years.

Deshon and Sambursky, when they went behind bars, were both 17 years old. Toothaker was 19.

Comeau, when he was stricken at the little .25-caliber pistol and had to laugh at the curly-headed youngster who held it—had been 38!

Tomorrow in the Boston Evening American the true detective series will continue with another thrilling New England crime story.

ALBERT H. DESHON — JOHN S. SAMBURSKY — STANLEY B. TOOTHAKER

Their youth and "mitigating circumstances" saved these Roxbury boys, Albert Deshon, 17; Robert Sambursky, 17, and Stanley B. Toothaker, 19, from murder convictions in the slaying of Police Officer Frank J. Comeau of Dorchester. But Deshon and Sambursky went to state prison for life for armed robbery. Toothaker was given a 12-year term for burglary.

The Punitive Tax Plan Delays Recovery

SQUANDERMANIA at Washington under the New Deal recalls John C. Calhoun's observation that the people are divided into TAX PAYERS and TAX EATERS.

The Southern statesman deprecated the day when the TAX EATERS instead of the TAX PAYERS should dominate the government, indicating that he feared that would be an evil day for our free institutions.

At present Congress is considering a proposal by the Administration which seems calculated to force private corporations to become as improvident in husbanding their financial resources as the central government has become.

President Roosevelt's proposal for a punitive tax on undivided corporate profits would PUT A PREMIUM ON PRODIGALITY in divesting a corporation of financial sinews and IMPOSE A SEVERE PENALTY ON CORPORATE THRIFT.

It has been suggested that one motive for the strange legislative proposal is to WEAKEN THE AUTHORITY OF BUSINESS EXECUTIVES.

In the past their responsibility for the use of corporate savings has become an important source of power.

If in the past there had been no corporate savings it would have been impossible to have financed progress and expansion on the scale achieved in the United States. In such circumstances executives would have to appeal to stockholders to subscribe additional capital every time growth was contemplated.

IN APPRAISING the significance of the President's tax plan, W. R. Hearst, in a letter to M. S. Rukeyser, declares:

"It seems obvious to me that Mr. Roosevelt's whole scheme of wanton waste and destructive taxation is a systematic plan not for economic purposes, not merely for political purposes, but for social purposes as well.

"Apparently Mr. Roosevelt is an out and out SOCIALIST.

"He believes in the socialization of business and industry.

"The power to tax is the power to destroy. Taxation was used to drive State currencies out of existence and concentrate the issue of currency in the Federal government. Mr. Roosevelt is using taxation deliberately in the same manner.

"He is proceeding to tax industry out of private hands and into the hands of government.

"That is the Socialist plan."

THE MERE act of excessive and unreasonable Federal spending of and by itself tends to disturb the established balance between government and business.

Prodigal spending, which must be followed by ruinously high taxation, entails a transfer of purchasing power from the individuals, who earned it, to the bureaucrats, who confiscate it.

The process diverts streams of income from productive purposes to the dead-end highways of Federal waste.

Of all the business baiting contemplated at Washington, the new tax proposal, which would be used as an instrument for economic planning, stands AT THE TOP OF THE LIST of deterrents to a resumption of normal prosperity and full employment in the United States.

A Fortunate Girl

(Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

The picture shows Pauline D'Antonio of New York. At the piano she sits, fingering the keys, playing nothing.

Pauline was engaged to marry John Fiorenza, who, police say, confessed the ghastly murder of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton, authoress. She didn't marry. For that, she's thankful.

To learn in time is luck. Pauline was lucky. All girls are not so fortunate.

In Pauline's words there is a lesson. Mothers will see it. Their daughters should read it:

"I'm glad I found out before we were married. I would have died had he been the father of my child and then brought me such disgrace."

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, April 24—Thoughts while strolling: Who remembers when there were no women columnists? Or parlor communists? Herb Roth suggests a thick sweater, goose-necked pipe and undershot bull dog. Miriam Hopkins and Margaret Sullavan seem to listen in a word. You know, in the clouds.

O. O. McIntyre

One word description of Mayor La-Guardia: Bouncey. Fun to watch Fun with his gals. He ignores them so politely.

No slang term so expressive as goofy. It's Hype Igoe's, I believe.

Or maybe Tad's. I can stand in front of a Childs' window and get hungry enough to cry.

Tip for Aurora, Indiana's, Chamber of Commerce: Round up your three native sons—Ed Hill, Frank Shutts and Elmer Davis—for a big Back Home day.

Quickest of the cinema fadeours: Mae West's.

Impossible feat in journalism: "Time" not welcoming Roy Howard Post story, "Boulevardier's Return." I do not know, but, I noticed myself rather tetay weaving phrases about hack country grub until I read Miss Kerr's descriptions.

As no other she has mastered the art of scattering gastronomical licks into a high polish. They made me feel like a Hamburger Joe checking up against Brillat-Savarin.

Among Miss Kerr's hunger-provoking peans were these: A breakfast of country sausage, cooked pinky soft within and a glorious shade of Vandyke brown without. Slices of fresh clean pork, chopped and savored with salt and black pepper and home grown powdered sage. Stashed in gravy. Buckwheat cakes from hand ground meal.

Also: Scalloped tomatoes laced with minced onion and early pokeberry shoots. Fried apples dusted ever so lightly with granulated maple sugar which carameled into delicious little spots. Sweet potato muffins, crisp outside, within light and dulcet.

Annals of literature contain no record of a writer so successfully changing his name as did Willard Huntington Wright. Outside his editorship of Smart Set when its appeal was solely to the intelligentsia, he was little known.

Although he wrote standard works and text books on art, music and literature, he was the highest of high brows of his era, a scholar of the Greenwich walktype who, although a young man, lived in the past. His intense study and research, coupled with sedentary habits, brought on nervous collapse. For almost two years he was abed.

His physician, to joust him out of his erudite reading rut, suggested detective and mystery and started him off with Gaboriau. To kill time and in the hope of replenishing a flat purse, he began to write mystery. A bit ashamed of them he used the pseudonym S. S. Van Dyne.

Today he is known almost entirely by that name and is the most highly paid writer of mystery fiction in the world, with a home in New York, a hacienda in California and a hobby of breeding Scotties.

Not many know that S. S. Van Dyne in his Willard Huntington Wright days was a columnist. He followed, as I recall, C. L. Edson on the Evening Mail. He did a magnificent job, too, in turning out a daily effort that sparkled with spontaneity and skewed bits of world comment. But it was too much of a grind, and after a few months he resigned. Somewhat bored by its triviality, too.

So many of my observations about Willard Wright are the results of seeing him at a magazine get-together recently. He wears a closely clipped and sharply pointed beard and with a Latin Quarter hat and a bow tie might easily be taken for one of those young savants of the Sorbonne. But his clothes are those smart fronts of Park and Fifth avenues. He seems to have sent for the new world he has entered and which he knew so little about.

From a Missouri weekly: "Shep Minter didn't show up at the Santa Fe depot on Nov. 11 came in."

Read! What pretty things they'll have to say around the clubs.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

In Passaic, New Jersey, a little boy, 11 years of age, sobs, "Why did I do it? I am so sorry!"

On April 2 this little lad does something that will blast his life regardless of what punishment the law may lay upon him. He shot and killed his mother.

It is a tragic and terrible thing to kill one's mother. But before you judge that child — listen to his Elsie Robinson story. He did not kill his mother wantonly, in cold blood. He killed her because she stood before him, with in hand, eyes blazing in rage—

Terrified, frantic, this child, who had felt the lash so often, turned like a cornered animal and—senseless to all save his own torture—shot the thing that menaced him.

I am a mother. I am 52 years old. Since I was 19 the care and study of children has been my main job.

WHIPPING IS WRONG

I have studied children from a psychologist's viewpoint as well as that of a mother—followed the processes of their changing minds and bodies, as well as fed their hungry young stomachs and comforted their grieving young hearts.

AND AS A MOTHER AND A PSYCHOLOGIST, I AM SICK AND ASHAMED AT OUR SENTIMENTAL TREATMENT OF BRUTAL FEMALES — OUR CALLOUS INDIFFERENCE TO MALTREATED CHILDREN.

We Americans will scream our throats out if we see a man kick a dog or beat a horse in public. But when a woman in the privacy and "sanctity" of her home nags a child to frenzy, or beats it into frantic revolt, we turn our heads away, shrug our shoulders—sentence her, if sentence is unavoidable, to 30 days.

There is no nobler profession on earth than motherhood, if it be performed finely, nobly, with self-control and intelligence. But there is no more vicious brute on earth than an angry female with a whip in her hand. And our public indifference to this fact brands us as cruel hypocrites.

As to the frequent and popular claim that one should "never whip a child in anger"—phooey! You can't whip a child any more than you can torture a bird unless you ARE angry.

If you were not angry—if you were thinking like a civilized human being thinks—you would use the same fair and reasonable arguments with that child which you would wish to have used with yourself.

The test of the savage indecency of the whole method lies in this—do you beat little Frankie when he is aged 20, playing football, and can knock you for the goal you deserve? You can bet your sweet life you don't!

IN SELF-DEFENSE?

NO; YOU BEAT HIM WHEN HE IS HELPLESS—AND YOU ARE PROTECTED BY PUBLIC OPINION AND THEN YOU PIOUSLY SAY, "SPARE THE ROD AND SPOIL THE CHILD."

That little boy in Passaic is 11 years old. A child at 11 is passing into puberty, and there is no time in human life when the nervous system is under greater tension—when emotions are less in control—when fear and fury are more easily aroused or work greater havoc.

How would you, who are 20 or 30 or 50, feel if a being two or three times YOUR size and strength stood over you with a lash in hand and proceeded to beat you until his or her own sadistic fury was satisfied?

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

I can tell you what you would do, if you had the spunk of a louse—and every court in the land would uphold you. You would kill in self-defense.

Yet you brand as a murderer an emotionally unstabilized child of 11, who goes frantic under the same provocation. And probably sentence him to a reform school, from which he will emerge, 99 times out of 100, a hardened criminal.

But the mother or father who can find no better way of training a child than by beating it like a brute, has no right to be a mother or father. And the angry woman who will lash a child of 11 is ten times as guilty as the poor hysterical baby who grabs a gun in self-defense.

I REST MY CASE.

New Painless Dentistry

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Comes the glad tidings that we need no longer approach the dentist with quaking knees. Since the Stone Age, we males, the alleged stronger sex, have gone to the gentlemen of the forceps and drills with fear in the very marrow of our bones.

Edwin C. Hill

Usually, indeed, some family relative or friend leads us by our trembling hand, assuages our terror and soothes as best she can our quivering nerves. The spectacle is not one which commends admiration for the masters of earth, but there it is.

But now, as I say, word goes out that the profession is approaching the solution of the problem of real painless dentistry. There has been a good deal of press agentry and hippodromming with unjustified claims and promises, but it appears that real progress is being made and that the time is coming when a painracked, fearstricken victim of toothache will actually go to his dentist with all the nonchalance that he visits his favorite bar.

LIKE A COCKTAIL

I am told, indeed, that the effect of one of the Analgesia treatments is a good deal like that of a Martini cocktail. At all events, the genius who does finally solve the problem will be entitled to a first-class myrtle wreath and to the cheers of mankind.

It is a very old evil which has afflicted the human race, this evil of aching teeth. It was good King Wenceslaus who once asked his court jester what occupation was most widely distributed among his subjects. The jester promptly replied "Dentistry, your majesty."

When asked to prove this assertion, the jester wrapped a large handkerchief around his cheeks and stood outside the cathedral on a fast day, moaning and groaning. Everybody who approached the doors of the church that day stepped at the sight of this simulated suffering and offered advice as to how to cure him of his toothache.

This included cures such as incantations to be said when the moon was full, black magic involving mandrake roots and black cats' tails, magnificent brews guaranteed to kill or cure the poor afflicted victim.

A few centuries ago, even a few decades ago, dentistry was anybody's business practiced by barber-surgeons, jewelers, tinkers and even blacksmiths—anybody who knew how to use a pair of pliers.

The ills to which the teeth are heir seem to be numbered among man's earliest known afflictions. The jaw of one of our very remote ancestors—a doughty warrior who slunk through the forests of Rhodesia, 125,000 years ago—shows that its owner knew the exquisite pain that comes from an abcessed tooth.

And in the tombs of Egypt, Greece and Rome, in distant Hindustan, on the other side of the world in Mexico and Peru, archeologists are still finding examples from the very remote past of golded teeth, teeth adorned with golden bands with inlays of gold, diamond, crystal and jade.

AN ANCIENT ART

Among the ancient relics of early civilization are artificial teeth with ingenious contrivances to hold them in place. For power, it seems, was the race too young to appreciate the beauty of parted lips and gleaming, pearly teeth.

An Egyptian poet, praising the charm of a princess of the House of Pharaoh, seven centuries before the Christian era, describes her smile with the same glowing phrases that have been echoed by poets ever since.

Incan princesses on the slopes of the Andes a thousand years ago, patrician matrons of Imperial Rome, the ladies of the Middle Ages . . . all submitted to long and difficult operations under primitive conditions and with instruments incredibly crude, to win back the charms ravaged by bad teeth.

Yet some of this ancient dental work was beautifully fashioned . . . as ingenious, experts say, as any to be had in modern centers of dental handicraft. But, for all its amazing workmanship, it was essentially handicraft, the work of the mechanic or craftsman, more closely associated with the art of the jeweler than the dentist as we know him now.

Through the ages only a few colossal minds suspected that there might be some relation between the teeth and general health. Hippocrates, the "Father of Medicine," author of that famous oath repeated to this day by all men going out to the practice of the healing art, saw the importance of keeping the teeth in condition, compounded a dentrifice and urged his wealthy Athenian clients to use it.

A few centuries later Galen, famous Roman physician, interested himself in dental ailments. During the middle ages other learned men fought superstition and ignorance, proclaimed the fact that the care of the teeth belonged in the realm of medical science.

But they were lone voices calling in a wilderness of indifference and old wives' tales. The brilliant insight of a few master minds could accomplish nothing without widespread, general education, without the printed page to make their knowledge permanent, without the newspaper to make their knowledge universal.

VITAL TO HEALTH

Dr. Miner, dean of the Dental School at Harvard, has made an estimate of the value of the nation's teeth, and it runs into astonishing figures. Here's what he says:

"Estimating the value of teeth at $500 a person, a small sum, we find the total national value to be 62½ billion dollars. If we estimate the cost of maintenance at $10 a year per person, that would come to one and one-quarter billion."

Staggering sums, undoubtedly, but not out of line with the known facts that in one year a quarter of the people in the United States actually received dental care at a cost of $446,000,000.

An astonishing amount, surely, when you realize that that sum was paid by only one-quarter of the people and that only one person in three owns a toothbrush. But even so, today America is the acknowledged leader of the world in the field of dentistry.

If Raw Deal Wins

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Until the American people repossess themselves of their rightful control of the Congress, personal government will be able to hide from them the larger part of its unsavory record.

Personal government today dominates both houses of the Congress. It not only packs the standing committees with its tools but it packs the special committees that do its will under the pretext of exercising the investigative power with which each house is clothed.

Personal government by means of gag-rule shuts off debate in the House, whenever debate would threaten the enactment of those measures which personal government drafts and sends to the House tagged as "must" bills.

Personal government is as yet unable, under the rules of the Senate, to gag that body and shut off debate.

But by the appointment of committees and by liberal rewards in the form of patronage and pork barrel projects to members of the Senate who bend the knee to personal government, it is able to exercise an influence on the deliberations of that body far beyond any contemplated by the framers of the federal Constitution.

EXERCISES INFLUENCE

And for those senators of the majority party who show any tendency toward recalcitrancy, personal government has its own system of punishment to re-enforce its own system of rewards.

What personal government has done to Congress it will do to the federal judiciary if it is re-elected next November.

Vacancies will inevitably occur during the next four years on the Supreme Court of the United States, on the United States Circuit Court of Appeals and on the bench of the federal district courts.

These vacancies will open the way for personal government to pack the courts with its own craven creatures and with the same careless disregard of the American system of government that personal government has packed the committees of Congress during the last three years.

It is bad enough and dangerous enough for personal government to exercise despotic power over both houses of Congress. But the plain people of this country will not feel the full force of the heel of personal government upon their liberties until the despotic power of personal government dominates the Federal Judiciary from top to bottom.

DESPOTIC POWERS

Once personal government grabs control of the Courts the last Gibraltar of American Liberty and of Justice, "the breath of Liberty's being," will have been razed to the ground.

Once the despotic power of personal government extends its arbitrary rule from the Legislative to the Judicial branch of the Federal government, where can the plain people look for the protection of their Constitutional guarantees set forth in the Bill of Rights of the Federal Constitution?

Who is fatuous enough to believe that Freedom of Speech, Freedom of the Press, Freedom of Assembly or Freedom of Worship or any other freedom which the government of the Constitution was established to protect would be the chief concern of judges handpicked by Mr. Farley, the job-master-general of personal government?

Personal government versus the government of the Constitution—"a government of laws and not of men"—is the paramount issue in this critical year, and all the journalistic jamborees of personal government, whether on its payroll or serving as its cuckoos in the Congressional press galleries, cannot hide that fact from thoughtful Americans who still retain their freedom of opinion.
